SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union)

LESSON FOR JANUARY 4

PETER PREACHES AT PENTECOST

LESSON TEXT—Acts 2:1-42.

GOLDEN TEXT—Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved.—Acts 2:21.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Joel 2:28-32; John 16:7-15; Acts 1:1-26.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Peter telling about Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Story of Pentecost.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Three Thousand Won in a Day.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S AND ADULT TOPIC—The Permanent Meaning of Pentecost.

I. The Day of Pentecost Fully Come (vv. 1-13).

1. Significance of the day. Pentecost means "fifty." It was the feast held fifty days after the wave-sheaf offering (Lev. 23:16). The wave sheaf typified the resurrection of Christ (I Cor. 15:20-23).

2. The gift (vv. 2-4). On this day the Holy Spirit came upon the disciples in a new way, and from that time forward he has worked on a new basis, having the crucified, risen and ascended Christ to present to the world.

3. Upon whom the Spirit came (v. 1, cf. 1:13-15)—the twelve and others, both men and women to the number of one hundred and twenty, showing that the gift of the Holy Spirit was for all believers. It was for this "promise of the Father" that the disciples were to tarry at Jerusalem (Luke 24:49).

4. The marks of the Spirit (vv. 2-4). The sound of a mighty wind (v. 2). This is surgestive of the mysterious, all-persuasive and powerful energy of the Spirit. Tongues of flame (v. 3). Tongues show the practical purpose of the Spirit's gift—witnessing; and the fire indicates his purifying energy burning up the dross, making effective witnessing for Christ. (c) Speaking in foreign tongues (v. 4). This was a temporary endowment for this special purpose.

5. The effects (vv. 5-13). (1) The multitude were filled with amazement and wonder, for these common men were transformed into men of power and influence. (2) Some mocked and foolishly accused the disciples of being intoxicated.

II. Peter's Sermon (vv. 14-47).

His analysis is perfect. He begins with a brief defense and scriptural explanation of the phenomena of tongues (vv. 14-21), and by a threefold argument proves the Messiahship of Jesus (vv. 22-36).

1. The introduction (vv. 14-21). (1) Defense of the disciples against the charge of being drunk (v. 15). This he does by citing Jewish customs, showing that they would not be drunk at such an early hour of the day. (2) A scriptural explanation. He shows that it was a partial fulfillment of that which Joel predicted (vv. 16-21, cf. Joel 2:28-32) would come to pass before the Messianic judgment, namely, an outpouring of the Holy Spirit and the salvation of all who call upon the name of the Lord.

2. The argument (vv. 22-36). It is threefold: (1) From Christ's works (v. 22). He was approved of God among the Jews by his miracles, wonders and signs which God did by him in their midst, with which they were familiar. (2) From his resurrection (vv. 23-32). The Old Testament scriptures had foretold the death and resurrection of Christ (Psalms 16:8-10). The disciples were living witnesses of Christ's resurrection, for they had seen and talked with him, and handled him since his resurrection (v. 32). (3) From his ascension to be at the right hand of God (v. 32). The proof that he had ascended on high was the wonderful miracle of the Spirit's operation in their midst; for he had said that upon his ascension into heaven he would send forth the Spirit. The conclusion is that Jesus of Nazareth is both Lord and Christ, the one of whom Joel prophesied (v. 36), and that the Jews are guilty of an awful crime in crucifying him.

4. The effect of the sermon (vv. 37-42). Many people were convicted of their sins, some 3,000 of whom repented and were baptized. The daily life of these believers was a proof of the Spirit's gift. The evidence that the coming of the Spirit was real is that (1) they continued steadfastly in the apostolic teaching (v. 42), that is, they were learning about Jesus Christ, being taught by the apostles instead of the scribes; they turned away from their blind guides and followed new ones. (2) They continued in fellowship with the apostles (v. 42). This fellowship was in the spirit, around Christ as the head; the one body being illustrated by the one loaf. (3) They continued in prayer (v. 42).

A Prayer.

Almighty and living God, we beseech thee to look with love and mercy on us. Keep us in thy faith and fear. Give us grace to resist the devil, and to renounce all his works and temptations. Guard us from the lusts and sins of the flesh. Shield us from the corruption of the world. Make us diligent and faithful in our appointed work. Keep us patient under trial. In anxiety and worry, help us to find trust and peace in thee. All of which we ask through Jesus Christ our Lord and Savior. Amen.

The Trouble With Tommy

By WILL T. AMES

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The trouble with Tommy Ellis showed itself from the first day he went to school. It was a little school, and there were just fifty hooks on the walls of the boys' "entry," with fifty-one boys to hang their hats on them. Half a dozen of the new boys were younger and smaller than Tommy, who had reached the ripe age of seven; but Tommy it was who had to lay his cap on the floor in the corner because he let the other fellows grab while he held back. Tommy didn't like having to put his cap on the floor any better than the other boys. But somebody's had to go there, and so it was Tommy's.

It wasn't because he was slow or stupid that Tommy, from that time on, took the dust of his schoolmates and later on the choice of whatever was being given out in the way of favors or jobs or opportunities. On the contrary, Tommy was brighter and quicker and naturally more skillful and clever than the majority of boys. But he was utterly lacking in self-assertiveness.

The only occasion on which Tommy's hand went up in time to be recognized by the teacher, when she was showing off her pupils to visiting parents or committeemen, was when he was the only child in the room who knew the answer to the question. If one or two or a dozen of the others were prepared with the desired information they were all sure to beat Tommy to it.

There was a little girl whom Tommy worshiped in his secret soul. One day her hat blew off. She was the school beauty, so five boys put chase after the hat. Tommy, as usual, got started last, having been bumped out of his stride by another boy. It was a freak wind and of a sudden the hat shifted its course and came straight at Tommy and a mud puddle. Tommy headed it off and, all blushes, took a single step toward his inamorata. Then another boy grabbed the hat away from Tommy and himself bestowed it upon its owner, with the air of one having rescued it from the puddle instead of purloining it from the abashed Tommy's worshipful hand. The little girl, whose name was Annabelle Hester, smiled benignantly upon the other boy, whose name was Floyd Cushman, and never even gave Tommy a glance.

And so it was. At twenty Tommy was holding down the worst possible job in the gift of the superintendent of the one-horse interurban trolley company, a job which no one else would take, and which necessitated his getting up at an unconscionable hour in the morning, and walking a mile after taking the last car into the barn at night, with all his leisure time in the middle of the day—and what use can a young fellow make of the hours from ten till three?

The use that Tommy made of them was to think, hopelessly and with a sinking heart, about that same Annabelle Hester whose hat he saved from being muddied when he was a little boy. Annabelle was a stenographer in town now, but she still lived in the suburban village, and very often rode out on the car on which Tommy collected the fares.

She was always friendly and nice to Tommy, and now and then he ventured to talk to her a little, but only now and then, because Tommy fancied Annabelle seemed a little nervous and ill at ease at such times, perhaps as though she didn't just care about getting too intimate with a conductor. Another reason was that Floyd Cushman, who was in college now, and going to be a lawyer, rode out with Annabelle whenever he came back to the village, which was pretty often, and quite took possession of her. Yes, Tommy felt altogether "out of it" with Annabelle.

Then the war came. Tommy went as a buck private and came back as one. He wasn't, it appeared, of non-com material, though an intelligent, studious and conscientious soldier. Floyd Cushman, jamming his way in the attention of his superiors at Plattsburg and later in France, attained to a captaincy before he met his finish above Verdun.

When Tommy was demobilized they gave him back his old run, and it was the third evening that he saw Annabelle Hester. The girl had climbed to the platform of the car and was on the point of entering when she glanced up and saw Tommy. She went white, then rosy. "Why, Tommy—Tommy Ellis!" she exclaimed. "When on earth did you get back? I didn't—I never heard—" Annabelle was becoming inarticulate.

Tommy Ellis had been through what no man can go through and still be quite as he was before. Much of his old self-consciousness was gone.

"Annabelle," he said in a manly, direct way. "I'm dreadfully sorry about Floyd. I'm the only one you know who was there when it happened. All the way back I was thinking you'd want to know, and that the first thing I'd do would be to tell you. If you'll let me know when, I'll get off and come over to your house and tell you."

"Do, Tommy; come tomorrow in your off-time. I'm going to be home. And I do want to hear—everything." Tommy didn't notice the odd, studying look the girl gave him. But he promised to go; and next day he went.

Tommy told Annabelle about the speed and rush of the great movement when the Americans cleaned out the Verdun salient; how most of the doughboys were racing to get in touch with the enemy, but now and then coming unexpectedly on the deadly machine gun nests of the rear guard; how Captain Cushman, commanding Tommy's own platoon because of a shortage of lieutenants, had stormed one of these enemy positions and had been shot leading his men across an open field. "He died bravely, Miss Annabelle," said Tommy, in conclusion. "I wish he could have lived to come back." And then, after a little, the new Tommy asserted himself enough to venture—"to you."

Annabelle looked straight at Tommy. "As a soldier," she asked, "do you think it was necessary for Captain Cushman to lose his life at that time and place? Do you think those Huns could have been driven out without a frontal attack? Was it good leadership to do what he did?"

"Why, Miss Annabelle," exclaimed Tommy, taken wholly by surprise by this questioning, "what—what makes you doubt it?"

"Because," replied the girl, "I know all about it. You are not the only person I have seen who was there. Sergeant Fanton of your squad is my cousin. He told me about it. It was a mad, blundering, headstrong piece of thoughtless bravado, and it cost many lives besides his. Tommy Ellis, I know something else. I know you didn't like Floyd Cushman. I know he always treated you contemptuously. Then why did you, when he was struck down, leave the cover Fanton had ordered you to take, and go out there into that rain of bullets in a dear, wonderful, foolish, crazy attempt to save him and bring him back to the rocks? I know all about it, I tell you! But why did you do it—what made you?"

"Why—why—why, Annabelle. There wasn't anything else to do—when I thought of you, waiting for him to come back."

"But, Tommy! I wasn't waiting for Floyd to come back. You dear, self-effacing, modest, morbid old Tommy—I was waiting for you. And I've always been waiting for you all my mortal life. Tommy Ellis, are you going to live the rest of your existence in the old way, letting everything go for want of enough cruelty or wickedness or—gumption—or whatever it is to reach out and grab? Or are you going to grab—me?" Annabelle was laughing and crying at once. But she cried altogether, and shuddered as she sobbed: "And you almost threw your life away!"

The war helped some. Annabelle helped a great deal more. Tommy got a better run next day. Last month he beat out three candidates for assistant division superintendent. If you push Tommy now you'll get pushed back.

Fish Plentiful in Chile.

Along the coast of Chile, many sections of which are practically uninhabited at present, graves of the aborigines are found in great numbers, and they invariably contain implements for sea fishing. From prehistoric times the coast of Chile has been noted for its diverse and extensive fisheries. The fishes are so plentiful that sea birds by the millions, feeding on them, are found along the coast, and the numerous guano islands indicate the great length of time the birds frequented these waters. With methods similar to those used in other countries, the fishing industry could be revolutionized and established on a very large scale. The present methods in Chile are no more advanced than they were thousands of years ago. The need is felt by the Chileans themselves. The lack of sea food was recently the subject of a demand from the laborers to the government.
