IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving remembrance of my dear husband, Mr. Frederick A. Wagner who departed this life, February 10, 1906.

Loved in life is death remembered.
His suffering days are o'er.
His pain and misery ceased.
God called him to his heavenly throne,
With Him to live in peace,
Where the angels smiled farewell to earth.

By his wife,
EMILY L. WAGNER.

OUR OBLIGATION
TO THE COMMUNITY

DURING THE YEAR 1919 this Company's revenue was not sufficient to meet its expenses and interest charges.

THE POSTMASTER GENERAL'S RATES, because of increased costs of labor and material, did not produce sufficient revenue to meet these obligations, and our forecasts show that under the present rates

DURING 1920 OUR DEFICIT
WILL BE EVEN GREATER.

A PUBLIC UTILITY'S OBLIGATION is to serve the public and serve it well, and when revenues are insufficient it cannot properly fulfill this obligation.

ASSUMING THAT THE VALUATION of this Company's property is fair and our management economical and efficient, both of which we are prepared to prove, we believe that the public will not deny us the right to earn a fair return.

THIS IS ALL the Company asks in its petition for higher rates now pending before the Public Service Commission.

UNCLE TED'S BED TIME STORIES

A FUNNY DINNER PARTY.

Jack had just returned from the station with his Uncle who had been on a trip to Washington. Of course, both Jack and Ruth were very anxious to hear all about their Uncle's trip and so after he had eaten his dinner and read the evening paper. Jack started teasing for a story.

"Aren't you going to tell us about your trip to Washington?" asked Jack as he climbed up on the arm of his Uncle's chair.

"Please tell us, Uncle Ted," chimed in Ruth.

"You kiddies never give a fellow a rest, do you?" laughed their Uncle as he put down his paper and lifted Ruth to the other arm of the chair. "I've told you a lot of things about Washington before but this time I think I will tell you something about the dinner which the Democrats held in Washington on the night of January 8. I didn't go but I have read all the speeches that were made and while at the National Capital, I talked to a number of the men who were there."

"What was the dinner for?" asked Jack.

"It was supposed to be given to give the various Democrats who want to run for President a chance to talk and say what they stand for and don't stand for. There were so many of them they had to hold two dinners at the same time. All of the speakers spoke at both places. I won't have time to tell you about what all of them said so will give you the most important things. First of all, President Wilson didn't go because he is still supposed to be too sick, so he sent a letter in which he still says that the treaty and the world club plan must be agreed to just as he brought it from France. What he did not say was, whether he would want the Democratic nomination for President this year which would be the third time he has run. This made a lot of the Democrats like Attorney-General Palmer, and James W. Gerard, who used to be our ambassador to Germany, sort of angry because so long as President Wilson doesn't say he won't run again they haven't much chance because Mr. Wilson has been the boss of his party for so long he can get just about what he wants. Now the thing that stands out most from the Jackson Day dinner, as they were called, is the fact that all of these speakers, except possibly William Jennings Bryan (who has been running for President on the Democratic ticket ever since I can remember and was never elected) were scared to death. They were scared for fear they would say something that would make their party even more unpopular with the people than it is now."

"What did Mr. Bryan say?" asked Ruth.

"Mr. Bryan made nearly all of the Democrats angry and caused them more worry than anybody else because he did not agree with President Wilson at all. President Wilson said that we cannot have reservations to the treaty to protect America, for that is what he said really means, and he also said the people should be permitted to vote next November at the election as to how they want the league. Well, Mr. Bryan shot holes right through what Mr. Wilson said because the 'Commoner', as Mr. Bryan is called, said that we must have strong reservations to the treaty and that the people must not vote on it. The result up to now is that Mr. Bryan seems to be getting stronger with his party and taking the work of bossing away from Mr. Wilson. It is said in Washington that the only way President Wilson can save his leadership is to give in to the majority of the Senators who want strong reservations to the treaty that will protect the United States first.

"The whole truth of the matter is that at the beginning of the fight over the treaty and the world club plan Mr. Bryan was just as bad as Woodrow Wilson. He wanted the world club plan just as Mr. Wilson brought it from Paris with all its horrible parts that I have explained to you both so many times. Now, when it is near the time for the Democrats to choose who they are going to have run for President and the Republicans are going to choose who they are going to run, Mr. Bryan and many of the rest of the Democrats are trying to make the people believe that they are ready to make the treaty and the world club plan safe for the United States. So, I for one, don't rely much on what Mr. Bryan or any of his kind says, even though what they say is a lot more American and right than what Mr. Wilson says. The one thing I thank Mr. Bryan for is, that he has split the Democratic party into two parts, one led by himself and the other led by President Wilson. They are fighting among themselves in a way now that shows they are not a fit party to run this government."

"Did the other speakers talk like Mr. Bryan?" asked Jack.

"Oh, no!" answered Uncle Ted. "They all seemed afraid of Mr. Wilson. Chairman Cummings of the Democratic National Committee for one said nothing except to try and make the past seven year record of his party look wonderful when we all know how terrible the management at Washington has been. Mr. Palmer and Champ Clark, who used to be speaker of the House of Representatives, did the same. They told how wonderful their party was in winning the war but didn't mention the boys who did the fighting or the great waste in money and materials by Secretary Baker and such men as George Creel. When Senator Hitchcock spoke, he is the man you know who led President Wilson's fight for the treaty in the Senate, he didn't say anything new. Senator Owen did the same and wound up with a statement that nobody can prove and we know is not true, that the world club plan 'will give the world 1,000 years of peace.' Governor Cox of Ohio made a monkey of himself when he said that the election 'result in 1918 was not a Democratic defeat.' That was the the time that Mr. Wilson asked the voters to elect a Democratic Congress and they elected a Republican one.

"Mr. Gerard, Senator Pomerene and even Secretary of the Navy Daniels, all seemed in one way or another to echo the warning of Mr. Bryan that to stock to the President's treaty policy is foolish and dangerous and that we must have reservations. Senator Pomerene tried to make apologies for the money and materials wasted by the Democrats during the war. Secretary Daniels made a real Republican and patriotic remark when he said, 'If real Americanism is to save itself, we must frown upon any and all appeals for votes based upon the views or policies of any other country under the sun.' That must have made Mr. Wilson turn over in his bed when he read that."

"The Democrats must be in a pretty bad fix.' said Ruth.

"I'll say they are," said Jack and with a hearty laugh his Uncle hurried them both off to bed.
