1887 [redacted] Emily Hollingsworth Incoming Mary 1994

SIDE ONE

you would rather have it definitely fixed for next Monday April 11th I hope I have made it clear dear Cousin that it will not interfere with your plans in any way. The house is in a great state of confusion the three girls packing for their trip on the boat - Forbes is to go with them, he and Nan to return on Wednesday I am glad that Charley is here to take them safely up. Maynadier has a bad cold and seems out of sorts generally. The rest of us are as well as usual I must now say good bye with fond love in which all join me

My dear Cousin Emily

This is such a lovely day that I should not be surprised to hear that you had gone to New York unless indeed the high wind which I know you dislike, makes you feel that it is best for you to stay where you were. I wrote to you on Friday that Charley did not expect to come home for a week you may imagine our surprise then at receiving a telegram by Saturdays boat asking that we would send for him that night - which we did and he got here at about half past ten looking very grimy after his mountain sojourn but in most excellent health and spirits. He had not heard any thing from Harry as to whether he had better stay / we had had
