You don't buy coal for ornamental purposes.

You buy it for the heat that's in it. There's more heat in a ton of the Lumber, Coal & Supply Co's. Coal than in a ton and a half of most other kinds. You can easily prove this for yourself. Try a ton of our coal and observe the big difference in heat-giving results. We sell it.

UNCLE TED'S BED-TIME STORIES

Jack Hears More About Governor Coolidge

"If you don't tell us now I know you'll never tell us." It was Jack talking after coaxing his Uncle for ten minutes to tell them some more about Calvin Coolidge, Vice-Presidential candidate on the Republican ticket.

"I suppose if I were dying," said Uncle Ted, "the last thing you'd want would be a story. Well, all right, come on over here, and you too, Ruth, and I'll start where I left off two weeks ago and tell you a few more things about Governor Coolidge."

"Has he any children?" asked Ruth.

"Yes, Ruth, he has two boys and they play the violin and mandolin quite well. I told you about the Boston police strike and how he handled that situation so well and how President Wilson sent him a telegram of congratulation when he was reelected Governor. Although he occupies the highest office in the great state of Massachusetts, he lives very simply in a two-story frame house in the town of Northampton and his telephone is on a 'party line' with the minister of one of the local churches. While in Boston at his official work he lives in a single room in a hotel and each week-end he makes the trip of about one hundred miles home to his family.

"The first public office held by Gov. Coolidge was that of clerk of Hampshire county, having been appointed to complete the term of a man who had died. When the term of office expired he would not run for it but returned to his law practice. Not long afterwards he was elected a member of the city council of Northampton. While serving on the city council he was elected city solicitor and a little later he represented the city of Northampton in the general court. In 1908 the people wanted him to run for Mayor. He made the race and was elected, and in 1909 was reelected to the same office.

"As he continued to be elected to these various offices he became more and more popular and in 1910 he was elected to the state senate. He served two terms there and for some time was president of the Senate. Of course, while he was in the Senate of the state he had an opportunity to know people from all parts of the state and after he left the Senate he held the office of lieutenant governor for three years. He left this office to become governor and proved himself one of the most able of all the war governors. He is not an orator but his speeches are of the plain and easily understood type. He is always earnest and convincing in what he has to say and his fund of dry humor has made him greatly in demand as a speaker throughout the New England States."

"Has he written much?" asked Jack, whose one ambition is to become a writer.

"Yes, indeed, Jack. In fact, he is better known as a writer than as a speaker. His writings are full of pointed epigrams. Here are a few 'There is no right to strike against the public safety by anybody, anywhere, any time.' 'Duty is not collective; it is personal.' 'Unless good citizens hold office, bad citizens will.' 'Those who attempt to lead the wage-earners, must first show that they themselves are patriotic.' 'We need more of the office desk and less of the show-window in politics. Let men in office substitute the midnight oil for the lime-light.'

"And here, kiddies, is a very good one to remember, 'Do the day's work. If it be to protect the rights of the weak, whoever objects, do it. If it be to help a powerful corporation better to serve the people, whatever the opposition, do that. Expect to be called a stand-patter, but don't be a stand-patter. Expect to be called a demagogue, but don't be a demagogue.'

"These quotations give you some idea of the way he thinks and writes. After the many big things he had accomplished his many friends wanted him to be an active candidate for his Presidential nomination. His friends went so far as to open 'Coolidge Headquarters' in Washington and Senator Lodge, Republican leader of the Senate, said he would present Governor Coolidge's name to the convention in Chicago if the Governor desired. But all of this action stopped when Coolidge said he would not be a candidate, stating that so long as he was Governor of Massachusetts his job was right in the State House at Boston. His marked ability was recognized in 1919 when he was given the honorary degree of doctor of laws by the three colleges of Amherst, Tufts and Williams.

"So you can see that the man who will be our next Vice-President, the second highest office in the United States, is a real man and a man who has accomplished things. At least Warren G. Harding and Calvin Coolidge will not be dictated to by anybody. President Wilson will be the dictator to Gov. Cox, should he be elected. So if the people should elect Mr. Cox they will simply be electing Mr. Wilson; in fact, it is rumored that he intends to stay in Washington and run every bit of the Government he possibly can. And should Mr. Cox be elected Mr. Wilson sure will run it unless Tammany Hall, the sponsors of Gov. Cox, succeed in getting the upperhand."
