General News.

Judge Spofford, at a Democratic mass meeting, held at New Orleans on the evening of the fourth, said: "The gorgeous vision of an independent South had passed away. If any one present still hugged that delusion to his breast, he was compelled to say, lay it down—lay it down gently and tenderly, if you will, as you lay down the lost darlings of your household to their long repose. It was but a fresh instance of the vanity of human wishes. But for all that, should we give over the duties and aspirations of life? No! there was still work to do, and stalwart arms to do it. Without mourning too long over the irretrievable past, we must meet manfully the living present and advancing future.

General Carl Schurz has made his report to the President on affairs in the South. It is intolerably lengthy, and is understood to be far more complimentary to the blacks than the whites. He says that it would require a large standing army at the South to enforce negro suffrage.—But as the advocates of negro suffrage desire a large standing army there, this statement hardly constitutes an objection to the Radical programme.

William Babe, Barthold, Dressen and Harmon Gossman, charged with conspiring to defraud the Government, in connection with claims of discharged soldiers, were committed for trial on Wednesday, in default of the aggregate bail of thirty-five thousand dollars. They have made a written confession of their guilt.

Mrs. Mumford, the widow of the Mumford who was hung by Butler, in New Orleans, and her three children, have recently returned to that city in circumstances of great destitution.

It is said that the French Minister at Washington has energetically protested against the appointment of General Logan as Minister to the Juarez Government in Mexico.

The Shreveport (Louisiana) journals come to us filled with accounts of outrages and murders committed by the armed freedmen in that vicinity. The negroes make no bones, according to these accounts, in shooting down white men in the highways and byways, whenever there is a chance for them do so with seeming impunity.

The Confederate ram Stonewall was forced by the gale to put into the harbor of Beaufort on Sunday last. The Stonewall is on her way to Washington, where she will be inspected by the Court Martial now trying Commodore Craven for not attacking her at Ferrol, in March last.

The Democracy of Wisconsin have done better than any other State in the recent elections.—They have gained two Senators and numerous Representatives, and come out ahead on the popular majorities in three Congressional districts.—With the same ratio of gain they have only to make one trial more to carry the State.

A gentleman from Appomatox Court House, Virginia, states that there is nothing left of the apple tree under which General Lee surrendered but a red hole in the ground, and it is feared that unless the hole is fenced in that also will be removed by curiosity seekers.

The President's conservative friends, in Washington, openly declare that Ex-Speaker Colfax's speech is in direct opposition to his policy, and assert that the President is in favor of the admission of Southern members of Congress without the test oath.

PUBLIC SALES.—Among our new advertisements in another column, it will be seen that Capt. Henry J. Strandberg will offer at public sale some valuable Horses and other Stock. We would here remind our readers that if they wish to obtain good and pure Stock, do not fail to attend this sale. Capt. S. has, for a long time, had the reputation of being one of our best Stock raisers.

Mr. J. A. Redman, near Skipton, it will also be seen intends to offer his Stock, Farming Implements, Household Furniture, &c.

A FINE FARM SOLD.—Thomas J. Clark, Esqr., Real Estate Agent, sold on Saturday last, Capt. Hy. J. Strandberg's splendid farm adjoining the town of Easton, known as "Brooklets," containing 135 acres, to Dr. John C. Earle for $24,000. This is acknowledged by all to be one of the best plantations in the county, and the Dr. has secured in the purchase of it a great bargain.

THE EVENING TRANSCRIPT.—This popular and favorite Journal which was suppressed in Baltimore by an order of Gen. Wallace, has again resumed publication under Wm. H. Neilson, Esq. its former editor and proprietor. We truly welcome its reappearance on our table and wish the editor success.

CIRCUIT COURT.—The Circuit Court for Talbot county, commenced its fall term on Monday, the 20th inst. Present, Hon. H. H. Goldsborough, Judge; Charles H. Mansfield, Sheriff; Samuel T. Hopkins, Clerk; P. T. Kennard, States Attorney. The following is the report of the proceedings:

November 20—State vs. James T. Slaughter, presentment for resisting an officer. Martin for defendant. Not guilty.

State vs. Wesley Moore, presentment for an assault on Jacob Moore, submitted. Guilty—fined 25 cents.

State vs. same, presentment for an assault and battery with a cane on John M. Hollis, not guilty. Martin for defendant.

State vs. W. H. Chambers, transcript of record from Caroline county for an assault and battery on Robert Hignutt by stabbing and threats to kill him, trial by jury; verdict not guilty. Martin for defendant.

Faulkner vs. Mackey, administrator of Mackey, appeal, &c. Judgement approved, Martin for defendant.

Slicer vs. Kinnamon, appeal, &c.; trial by jury. Martin for defendant; verdict for applicant; judgment reversed, and judgment for costs above and below; motion for a new trial.

State vs. Chance, indictment for stealing a canoe sail from J. Clinton Keats, trial by jury, verdict not guilty. Martin for defendant.

SATURDAY EVENING POST.—We notice there has been a change in the management of this well known and favorite weekly, by the admission of a lady author as editor. Mr. Emerson Bennett, the popular writer, now writes exclusively for THE POST, and announces a continued story, to begin the first of the year, to be called "THE PHANTOM OF THE FOREST," a wild story of the early settlement of Kentucky. Bella Z. Spencer, the editor, whose novel of Ora has been so highly praised, also announces a continued story, to be called GENEVIEVE HOWE. Florence Percy, the author of "Eve Isle," Louise Chandler Moulton, August Bell, Eleanor C. Donnelly, Beatrice Colonna, Mrs. Margaret Hosmer, and a host of other popular authors also write for The Post. THE POST contains, besides stories, sketches, poetry, humorous articles, &c., an original Agricultural Department, and original and selected Receipts for Housekeepers. Wheeler & Wilson's celebrated Sewing Machines are offered as premiums to those who get up certain clubs—an easy way of getting a Sewing Machine, worth in Philadelphia FIFTY-FIVE DOLLARS! The price of THE POST is $2.50 a year, two copies $4, four copies $8, eight copies (and one gratis) $16.—Sample copies, containing the terms and inducements in full, are furnished gratis. Address H. Peterson & Co., 319 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.

"A DEMOCRATIC ALMANAC."—The publishers of The New York Day Book, Van Evrie, Horton & Co., announces that they have in preparation "A Democratic Almanac." It is to contain, "besides the usual matter of Almanacs, full an official Election Returns, a list of all officers, Federal and State, a careful Chronology, Abstracts of Laws, etc., etc., making a complete Compendium or Manual for the Politicians." This will be a valuable work, and should be in the family of every Democrat in the county. Encourage every work that will tend to spread true Democratic principles abroad far and wide. Send on for an excellent almanac. The price will be 25 cents, sent post paid: five for $1,00, or $2,25 per dozen; $15 per hundred. Agents wanted in every county of the United States. Address Van Evrie, Horton & Co., No. 162 Nassau Street. New York city, N. Y.

Jefferson Davis.

The following beautifully written paper has been handed us for publication. It is from the eloquent pen of Mrs. Downing, of Virginia, written at the request of friends during a brief visit to this city. Mrs. D. we hope will soon be extensively and better known in the South by the productions of her pen, now passing through the press. She is the author of that interesting work entitled "Nameless," of the publication of which the public has already been advised. The petition has already been extensively circulated, and we learn has many signatures.—Richmond Sentinel.

PETITION.

To His Excellency, ANDREW JOHNSON, President of the United States:

We, the undersigned, acting on the part of the women of your Excellency's native city, and actuated by the spirit which animates the women of the entire South, most respectfully beg leave to present to your Excellency our petition.

This is in behalf of Jefferson Davis, lately invested with all the prerogatives of a position similar to the one in which your Excellency, by the direct interposition of the hand of God, has been placed, now a captive languishing in prison. Whether that prison be the just doom of him who is suffering from its effects, is not a question to be argued by us. If it be conceded that the man who is the representative of a people must suffer the consequences of such representation, then the decree which consigned Mr. Davis to imprisonment in a land which has hitherto been the world's synonym for freedom, was a most proper one, and he is undergoing only a fitting expiation for the offended majesty of the law. But has he not suffered it sufficiently long? Is it impossible for justice to be tempered with mercy? Will not the resources of your Excellency's mind devise some means by which their antagonism may be removed?

Is not America sufficiently glorious? has she not been proved sufficiently great to allow her to rise superior to the petty conventional codes of smaller nations, and to exhibit to the world at once her power and her magnanimity, by extending a free pardon to one who though he may have erred grievously against her, is still her child and still loves her? Will not your Excellency be America's agent in this matter? Will you not as the embodiment of her strength and greatness, unloose the bonds of the patient sufferer, who has so meekly and uncomplainingly seen the Spring blossom into Summer and Summer fade into Autumn—seen it through his prison bars?

Will you not release him before the dreary Winter comes, bringing with it so much of material discomfort to his frail and delicate body, and what is far worse than the most acute physical suffering, the Wintry chill of hope deferred to his soul which pines for freedom? Give him back, we implore you, to the women of the South. He is ours and we love him!

We bound up our hearts and souls in him and the cause which he once represented. God has seen fit to permit that cause to be lost forever, and we bow to His decree. In all the broad South there is no one so mad as to cherish hope, that Mr. Davis may in any way connected with a future consonant with what our wishes were when he was invested with the dignity which has proved so fatal to him. No such thought has an existence; he has no future, and all our hopes in him were connected wholly with the past and are dead forever.

But we would be less than women if we forsook him with whom the cause which we loved and have lost was identified, and, woman like, we cling to him all the more closely because he is suffering and stands in need of our sympathy.

The sweetest and holiest season of the year is fast approaching, bringing to human remembrance Him who opened the prison doors of the enchained universe and gave freedom to a ransomed world.

Will not your Excellency mark the Christmas of 1865, a year which has witnessed the reunion of a glorious country and made you its Chief Magistrate, by giving as a Christmas gift to the women of the South, the freedom of Jefferson Davis?

Listen, we implore your Excellency, to our pleadings; give us the boon we ask, not so much because you may consider the gift right in itself, but because there is no wrong in it, and because we want it so much, and beg for it so earnestly.

Give back Mr. Davis to his own little children—give him back to us, who once stood in that relation to him. Do not, we beg you, permit Death to anticipate you and give to his sorely tried spirit the freedom which it is now in the power of your excellency to bestow; and by his release make for yourself a home in every woman's heart—cause your name to ring with praises in every Southern woman's mouth, and go up to God, night and morning, with every Southern woman's prayers, loaded with blessings and shielded by petitions for your long life and felicity.

Give us back Jefferson Davis, and by so giving, in your own right, do what, as your Excellency is very well aware, has never yet been done, conquer the women of the South!

All of which is most respectfully submitted.

RALEIGH, N. C. October 26, 1865.

☞The following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted by the Quarterly Conference of Easton Circuit, M. E. Church, November 11, 1865:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God, whose ways are inscrutable and past finding out, to take from our midst one whose name is loved, and whose memory is greatly cherished by us.

WHEREAS, The M. E. Church, by the decease of Bro. William B. Willis, has lost one of the oldest, most pure, substantial, and liberal supporters.

WHEREAS, This community, by the bereavment has lost one of its most popular, benificent, and spirited members. Therefore,

Resolved, 1st, That we submit with profound reverence to Him whose ways are enshrouded in clouds and darkness; and mournfully kiss the rod that has smitten us, as the recepter of Him who is too wise to err.

2d, That we as a Quarterly Conference, of Easton Circuit, for the M. E. Church, devoutly acknowledge before God, our great loss as irreparable, unless Divine Providence raise up another to fill his place.

3d, That we fervently, in humility, and contrition pray God, as the Father of the Fatherless and the hope of the Widow to bless and sanctify this bereavement to the eternal benefit of the family and friends of the deceased.

4th, That we tender our condolence and sympathy to our widowed sister in her loneliness, and also to the children in their grief.

5th, That a copy of these resolutions be presented to the family and published in the Easton papers.

T. JEEFERSON THOMPSON, President.

THE UNITED STATES AND ENGLAND.

Further about the Shenandoah---Capt. Waddell's Letter to Earl Russell.

By the latest European steamers we have further particulars of the surrender of the Confederate cruiser Shenandoah:

LANDING OF HER CREW AT LIVERPOOL.

The officers and crew of the Shenandoah were paroled on the 8th inst., and sent on shore at Liverpool. One of the journals of that city says:

Each of them brought on shore a large quantity of luggage, and they appeared to have no lack of money—facts which appeared to attest that their long cruise has not been unrewarded. The news of their arrival soon spread, and crowds of persons formed themselves into groups around the sailors and endeavored to draw them into conversation. These attempts, however, rarely succeeded, and when they did it was evident that the men spoke rather to evade curiosity than to satisfy it. The men indeed, appeared to be themselves quite in the dark as to their position, and though under the impression that they had done with the Shenandoah for good and all, appeared to labor under a fear of committing themselves or their officers by some rash statement. Some of them eagerly questioned the bystanders as to what the English people thought of the Shenandoah, and two or three of them expressed the greatest surprise that the officers of that vessel should even have been suspected of pursuing their work of destruction with a knowledge of the termination of the war. The men speak freely of the circumstances which led the Shenandoah to terminate her privateering career; namely, the meeting with the ship Barracouta, which the crew are unanimous in alleging as the first source through which reliable information was received of the termination of the war. Many of the crew of the Shenandoah are Liverpool men, and these, immediately on being landed, drove off to their homes. Of the others, a few went to private boarding-houses, and several went to the Sailors' Home. They were paid off in American dollars.

LETTER FROM CAPT. WADDELL.

The following is an extract from Capt. Waddell's letter to Earl Russell:

"In obedience to orders, I found myself in the Artic and Ochotsk seas, far removed from the ordinary channels of commerce, and in consequence of this awkward circumstance I was engaged in acts of war until the 28th of June. I was ignorant of the reverse suffered by the Confederates, and the total obliteration of the government under which I acted. I received the first intelligence of the downfall of the Confederacy cause on the second day of August, from the British bark Barracouta, and desisted immediately from further acts of war until I could communicate with an European port and learn if the intelligence was true. I could not have been sensible that the tales told by the American ships were true, but merely upon the statements of a British captain I diligently sought for a precedent in the law-writers for guidance in the future control, management, and final disposal of the vessel, but found none. Finding the authorities questionable under which I acted, I immediately ceased cruising and shaped her course for the Atlantic. I did not feel justified in destroying the vessel, but on the contrary thought the ship should revert to the American government. I therefore sought Liverpool to learn the news, and if not without foundation to surrender the ship, with her guns, stores, and apparel complete, to the British government, for such disposition as it should deem proper.

THE SURRENDER.

The Shenandoah was surrendered to the American Consul on the 10th, who took formal possession, and placed her under Captain Freeman and a crew of his own selection, to convey to New York.

THE ALABAMA CLAIMS.

The London Times says that it is impossible for the American government to abandon the claims for the depredations of the Alabama, but it is quite possible for a government to yield nothing, yet do nothing. We must prepare to be told that the United States will abate no jot of its demands, and will reserve the right of enforcing them: but still when the temper of the people is calmed, when commerce has had time to renew the links which bind the two nations together, when the memories of war fade into the past, there will be little disposition to dwell on unfortunate but inevitable casualties.

The London Daily News confidently dismisses the supposition that the Alabama claims can become a direct cause of war between the two countries, but it trusts that something will yet be done to bring the dispute to an early practical settlement, as it is one which can in no other way be disposed of. It would be an eternal disgrace if both goverments should confess themselves unable to find any but a violent solution of their differences, but there is a state of nominal peace which has many of the disadvantages of war.

The Collection for the South.

The collection taken up in the different Catholic churches of Maryland, for the relief of Southern families made destitute by the war, may be said to be now complete and to reach a sum a little short of $12,000. Of this amount we understand that about $6,000 have already been distributed—principally in Virginia, Georgia, South Carolina, Florida and Mississippi. In parcelling out the money, differences of religion have in no instance been considered. The applicant had only to have his or her necessities properly vouched for to become a recipient of the fund.

In one instance the widow and children of a deceased Methodist minister were relieved. In another an accomplished lady who had fallen from affluence to want, addressed the Most Rev. Archbishop by letter, stating that she understood that the "Romish Church" had made a collection for the suffering poor in the South, asking relief at the same time. His Grace, satisfied that her appeal was well founded, remitted to her a sum of money, but gently remarked in his letter, that he presumed that the epithet "Romish" was inadvertently used, as it was one that Catholics always considered offensive. This brought back a kind reply, in which the amiable and accomplished lady remarked, that what the Archbishop delicately called "inadvertence" she must own was worse than that, it was "ignorance."

The funds sent South as far as it could be done, have been placed in the hands of the Sisters of Mercy and Charity, with instructions that they must be dispensed without reference to creed, that people's necessities must be the only guide. The business of these pious ladies is always with the needy, the sorrowing and the unfortunate, and therefore none are more apt than they to know the extent of want and suffering, and therefore none more fit to point out where relief should be administered.—The Catholic Mirror.

Plain and Sensible Talk.

A circular of Capt. John C. Barnet, Assistant Superintendent of the Freedmen's Bureau, dated at Charlotte, N. C., and addressed to the freedmen of western North Carolina and the adjoining districts of South Carolina, shows that his observation of the situation and interests of the freedmen is not through sectional spectacles. He gives them good counsel and friendly warning as indicates that he has looked at the freedmen as he is. He says that he finds many idling and loafing, while their families are suffering for food and are without shelter. He has also made the discovery that all the freedmen are not as reliable as the reputation of the "reliable contraband" would have led us to expect. He actually says that they, "as a people, have very little regard for the truth, and that he has not entire confidence in their veracity." Having found these faults, the assistant superintendent proceeds to assure the colored people that they must first learn to tell the truth, and then he promises to give them justice in all matters between themselves and their employers.

Upon many subjects he disabuses their minds of erroneous impressions, and counsels them with severe plainness as to the things that are required of them in their new social relations. He tells them that the government, having freed them as a military necessity, expects them to labor and "work out their own salvation." As a result of doing this, he warns them of a condition that would be far worse than slavery, and that their position as freemen necessitates industry and integrity, unless they wish the fate of the North American Indian to overtake their race. He explains that the freedom which they have is the freedom of any man to make his own contracts, to receive the benefit of labor, to choose an employer or not, to keep and govern his own family, and to rear and educate his children. He is so frank with them as to use the following language:

"The South is your natural home, and Southern men will be your friends. The majority of you were raised, have grown up on the same plantations with your former masters, and I know it to be a fact that there is a feeling, a sympathy existing between you that does not nor never can exist between you and the people of the North. If Southern men are your enemies it is your bad behavior that has made them so. The fact is that you know not how to appreciate your freedom, and have grossly abused it."

In conclusion, Capt. Barnet warns the freedmen against secret meetings for unlawful purposes, and finally says:

"I also wish to caution you against one other matter—that is as regards your right to vote.—You have other and more important matters to attend to now. Never agitate this question, but leave it for others to settle. In order to vote, a man should be educated. You are not. Had you that right in your present situation it would be a curse to you—you would be as so many tools in the hands of bad men and politicians. So dream not, talk not, of things that at this time would be to your disadvantage and to your injury."

What the Illustrious Abernethy said.

"Well, sir, what's the matter?" said Abernethy, the great English surgeon, to a cadaverous-looking patient, who had called to consult him. "Oh, nothing serious," was the reply, "my stomach and liver are out of order, that's all." "Do you call that nothing serious?" said Abernethy; "I tell you, sir, that when these two organs are out of order, as you call it, there's not a square inch of the body that is not more or less diseased, nor a drop of blood in it that is in a healthful condition." Nothing can be more true, therefore it is of the very highest importance to keep the stomach and liver in a vigorous condition. If the one is weak and the other irregular in its action, tone and control them with HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS—the most genial vegetable Restorative and Alterative that has ever been administered as a cure for Dyspepsia and Liver Disease. It is recommended by distinguished surgeons and physicians of the United States Army, by officers of the Army and Navy, by our first authors, by eminent clergymen—in fact, by thousands of the most intelligent of every class, as an unequalled protective against epidemic and malarious diseases, and as a perfectly innocuous, but at the same time powerful, invigorant and alterative.

RAIL ROAD NOTICE.

I AM instructed by the Board of Directors of the Md. & Del. R. R. Co., to notify the stockholders and all interested in the completion of the work, that six miles of said road has been adjusted, and now is in running order; that iron has been purchased and paid for by the Contractor, and is, together with a large amount of ties, being transported on the line of the road, and the work is in active progress. In view of these facts I am directed to urge all delinquent stockholders to come forward and pay their subscriptions, and to solicit new subscriptions of stock. Now is the time when every friend of the road should render all the aid in his power. The present contract is one more favorable for the company, and the early completion of the road, than could have been looked for under the circumstances, and it will require but little aid to connect the waters of the Chesapeake with the Delaware Rail Road; when the whistle of the iron horse and the welcome sound of the cars may be heard as the messengers, that our enterprise has been accomplished, and with it the prosperity of our section of country commenced.
