TUESDAY, MARCH 6, 1877.

T. K. ROBSON, Editor

What will be free from the demoralizing, the corrupting, the debasing effects of the Florida-Louisiana business? No Republican in the land. No church or congregation or public charity controlled by Republicans can escape the taint. The counting in of Hayes is not only a fraud, to say that the electoral vote went for him is to utter a lie, a notorious and wicked lie. Every Republican that approves and justifies counting him in must approve and justify a fraud and a lie. They can not do it without stultifying their conscience and shifting their manhood, yet all Republicans with very few exceptions are ready to swear that he was fairly elected. Professing christians of all denominations as well as office-holding politicians, will insist that he was fairly elected, and that his inauguration is right. No Republican can do otherwise without contaminating his party and falling from grace. In Congress, in State legislatures, on the hustings, in the pulpit, at the duke, in the saloon, on the streets, in the family circle, everywhere will Republicans, of former good character, and of infamously bad character, will be endeavored approving, justifying, and defend the CRIME as right. The father will justify and defend it to the son, knowing that the son knows but too well that the father is lying. The son will justify and defend it to the father, when he knows that the father knows that the son is lying. The minister of christ will justify and defend it knowing that his flock knows that he is justifying and defending a fraud, a lie, and an indecency. The deacon and the class leader will justify and defend it in the presence of their disciples, knowing that their disciples know that they are justifying and defending a crime. And all will be so steeped in the crime of falsehood and fraud that no Republican will be able to rebuke another. Maintaining and defending the lie become a part, and important part, of their religion. The demoralization will be all pervading through the whole Republican organization. And the reasoning facilities will operate in it in this way; if this fraud is no sin, and is justifiable, why not may all frauds be justified? And if such a crime as this is justifiable, may not all other crimes be justified, when committed to serve some supposed good purpose? And the reasoning faculties will give an affirmative response to these propositions, and the doctrine once accepted, practice will follow, whatever interest or ambition prompts. And the commission of one crime will lead to another, until our whole system of public morality will be overthrown, if these people are the ruling majority. Such is to be the natural fruits of counting in a fraudulent President, because of the strength of party feelings, and the desire for party supremacy. It is horrible to contemplate millions of good men, rushing to the front to justify and defend a fraud and a lie—a great crime against the constitution—simply for party purposes. If there are any good, conscientious men in the Republican party, and there must be such, their present position is most unenviable. We can not see how they can remain Republicans, and defend their party's action, and maintain a good conscience. We can see no other course for them to pursue, if they would remain pure, than to openly denounce the wrong, and to sever all political association with the wrong doers. In this way only can they relieve themselves of the contamination which must follow longer fellowship with such scoundrels as Patty Cake Mills and Gov. Kellogg, whom proved by the Republican party as a standard of Republican morality.

The Republican party, all powerful in the country ten years ago, is now in a minority of more than 1,000,000 on the white vote, and what is worse, the colored voters are leaving it by thousands. This is the direct result of its tyranny, its injustice, its hypocrisy, its jobbery, its barefaced robberies, its public stealing, its vicious legislation, its dot estable frauds, and its corrupt admin istration.—Hayes is the Prophet who is to arrest the disintegration of the Republican party, and bring back the white vote to its support; and he proposes to do it by buying up Southern Democrats with public offices. Great God! is he stupid enough to suppose that the Southern people are made of the same stuff as Wells and Anderson, and others of that ilk? But a short time ago he lamented his own defeat only on account of the negroes; now the negroes may go to Kingdom Come, if he can but capture the Southern Whites! He is willing to give them anything they may ask, if they will but bow down and worship him and the party that has ruined them! Can they be bought out in that way? "Not if the Court knows herself, and she sometimes thinks she does." No, Mr. Hayes, the Southern Democrats are not to be bought up with office, and are not to be cajoled by flattery. They demand as a constitutional right, that the Southern States be let alone—to be allowed to manage their own State affairs in their own way, agreeably to the Constitution, and not to have carpet-bag rulers forced upon them with the bayonet, and that they intend to have all at his hazards. They have felt the smart of Radical misrule, and they will never kiss the rod that smote them. They have been misrepresented and maligned in a most shameful manner by Republicans of high and low degree, and they have been plundered by yankee Republicans adventurers, backed by the Federal power, until they have little now to lose but honor, and they will not trade that for the spoils of office. A few may do it, because they are too poor to resist temptation, but the live, active, intelligent, representative, influential men of the South never, no never. If this is the last and only chance to save the Republican party, it is a "lost cause" and perdition awaits it, and not even a defeated President, armed with $500,000,000 of public plunder, can save it. The South can stand four years more of Republican rule as well as the North—there is nothing like as much smashing up going on now at the south as there is at the North—then her time will come. Until then she will maintain her political unity, and depend on her united strength for her rights, and not on Republican generosity, which is as selfish as it has been mean and devilish. No, Mr. Hayes your scheme will not succeed. The South is not purchasable, and will scorn your offered bribes. The talk about buying her with the offices is but adding insult to injury. You may buy up a few scallawags there who were once with your party, but that is all, and they don't amount to a row of pins, for not even the negroes now have any confidence in them. They are only acting with the democrats because the Republican party in the South has proved itself so ineffably mean that no decent white man can stomach it.

The doctrine set up by the Republican party respecting elections amounts to the very climax of absurdity. It holds that Congress has the right to pass enforcement acts, to insure fair elections, to appoint marshals and deputy marshals, to control ballot-boxes and maintain fair elections; that these marshals have the right to use the army and navy of the United States, if needed, to execute the enforcement laws, and thinly secure fair elections; but after the election takes place, of bulldozing, and fraud, and intimidation, and violence, and corrupt management have succeeded in defeating the election of the man, and the corrupt politicians succeed in palming off as President a man who was not elected, Congress has no power to inquire into the matter and right the wrong. If Congress has no business there, it has no business to pass enforcement laws, to appoint United States marshals to supervise elections, nor the right to use the army or navy to interfere in the matter. The one power implies the other, and to deny the right to inquire into a flagrant fraud after having appointed officers and employed the army to prevent it, is the very quintessence of absurdity. For the Republican party to be consistent, it must admit that the enforcement act was passed for the purpose of fraud, that the appointment of deputy U. S. marshals and the employment of the army at the elections in the South, were to aid in fraudulently defeating the popular will; and the refusal to inquire into the fraud is but a part of the general plan of fraud contemplated in the original passage of the enforcement law. If the law is a fraud, and the execution of it is a fraud, it is consistent for the Republicans to refuse to inquire into the fraud after it is consummated under the laws, and not otherwise. But is not a party of fraud a fraud itself and is it not a mistake to presume that the American people will uphold such a fraud after they understand it? In the counting in of Hayes by fraudulent manipulations, the Republican party has gone a step too far; it has shown its hand and justly forfeited the respect of all honest men.

The deed is done. Fraud and perjury have triumphed. Tilden, who was elected, has been counted out, and Hayes, who was defeated, has been declared President. He was sworn in on Saturday, and the inaugural glorification took place on Monday. The Democrats, although cheated by the prejured national returning board, which refused to inquire into admitted frauds in Florida and Louisiana, and counted vote after vote, where it was notorious that the electors were ineligible under the constitution, stood by the law until the dirty job was through, and then withdrew from the House in a body before the vote was declared, leaving President of the Senate to announce the result to his fellow conspirators alone. No more effective rebuke could have been administered. No one can tell what may hereafter result from counting in this defeated candidate—this declaring that a fraud is as good as a fact, if it may be but bolstered up by forms, and protected by technicalities. Some other party, or the same party at some future time, may attempt to repeat the experiment, and if may be resisted by force; then civil war with all its horrors will consume the country. The constitution, now outraged in its most important provisions, will then be overthrown, and the people enslaved. Such may be the result, at no distant day, of imposing a fraudulent President on the people by the Republican party of 1877.

Hayes made a ninny of himself by making his Fremont speech. It was read in derision in the House of Representatives one day week, and convulsed both parties with laughter.

The new President will be addressed as His Fraudulency, instead of "His Excellency."

PAIN IN THE BREAST.

Kantz P. O., Snyder Co., Pa., July 9.

This is to certify that I have been afflicted with pain in the breast, accompanied by a severe cough, for nearly five years, which had brought me so low that at times I was unable to do anything. After having tried all the various medicines I saw advertised, without the least benefit, I was induced by a friend from Danville to give Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry a trial. The first bottle gave me almost immediate relief, and I was soon enabled to do a good day's work. I cheerfully recommend this article to the public as a safe and effectious remedy for diseases of the lungs. Conrad Kantz.

50 cents and $1 a bottle. Sold by all druggists.
