RECOGNIZING WOMEN IN POLITICS

Some of the women prominent in the Republican organization are said to be dissatisfied because no women were included in the "best minds" with whom President Harding consulted in shaping his initial policies. There will be many demands for the appointment of more women to public office, both in the federal and state governments.

How far should women be selected for the higher places in government and political management? Many women of a confident, energetic, and intelligent type, feel just as well able to exercise political leadership as any man. They have the same ambition to advance in this field that men have, which is perfectly legitimate.

The men will be disposed to feel, however, that women are new in this form of activity. Politics is a game that calls not merely for cleverness, but for long experience. Many women who were most active in their campaign for suffrage had never taken any great interest in political problems. It will take a little time for them to familiarize themselves with the many questions that are novel to them.

The skillful political manager will recognize that women are not going to line up just like the men. The men can not always figure how they will react on any given proposition. The shrewd politician will want to include women leaders in his circles of advisers and will study very carefully how pending propositions are going to affect their point of view.

Many of the old time slogans of party politics, that drilled the masculine cohorts into line for many years, will have mighty little influence on the new voters. And other considerations relating to home interests and the welfare of children and efficiency of education, which have been considered merely secondary and sentimental by old line politicians are going to weigh heavily with these women. Some politicians do not yet realize this truth.

WOMEN IN BUSINESS—OBSTACLES TO SUCCESS OF WOMEN

A woman who has investigated the capacity of women to undertake responsible positions names objections which business men have given toward placing their most important jobs in the hands of her sex. She mentions the following points, where it was claimed that women have not persuaded the business community of their competence.

1.—Lack of tact in managing people.

2.—Lack of authority and prestige, especially with other women, in dealing with both customers and employes.

3.—Lack of a logical sense of justice, which would enable them to settle disputed points in a broad and fair minded way.

4.—Insufficient mental ability to grasp a principle or policy in a large way and apply it to particular cased firmly and decisively.

5.—Physical incapacity for the wearing strain of important business positions.

6.—Lack of nervous ability to take responsibility and not worry about it and to throw it off at the end of the day.

These objections may arise from mere conservatism and prejudice. Many men argue that as a woman never has held a certain position, hence she never could. As far as tact goes, women are usually considered much superior to men. Many women have been presidents and principals of colleges and schools, and they display dignity, force, and business efficiency in this difficult position. They do well as proprietors and managers of hotels and restaurants. They have made good as superintendents of schools.

As they get experience in hundreds of lines, business men are likely to lose the old prejudice and bid for their services on the same level as men. Certainly many of the bright women and girls of Carroll county show every indication of ability to rise to this higher level of competence.

A NEW ADMINISTRATION

Formerly when a new administration began to administer the government at Washington most of the people belonging to the opposite party at once proceeded to condemn all its acts. The old timers could see no good in the ideas of their opponents and would make wholesale attacks on their motives.

Nowadays a great body of people cheerfully give recognition to good work by political opponents. Every new administration within recent years has started in an atmosphere of political good feeling, and Mr. Harding's will be no exception.

Yet party spirit will never die out. It grows out of the different theories that people entertain in regard to economic and governmental methods. If everybody thought alike there would be no progress. But people recognize that their own opinions are always fallible, and they should be willing to acknowledge that their opponents are as honest as themselves.

THE NEW PRESIDENT'S START

The country has been in a somewhat questioning mood in regard to Warren G. Harding. He never had so conspicuous a personality as some. Most politicians are self confident and assertive. They take a front place in the spotlight, with confidence in their ability to solve all questions. As a consequence they involve themselves and the people in endless difficulties.

President Harding is of a different type. He is a modest sort of a person and undervalues rather than overestimates his own powers. Instead of going ahead with bold assurance to select his cabinet and outline his policies, he hastened to call into consultation a group of the country's ablest men. His critics called this weakness, and they said it meant he had no ability and policy of his own.

But ow the result begins to appear. Its first effect is to give him probably the ablest cabinet that has been assembled in this generation. It is a cabinet of big men, and nearly every one of them is of presidential size himself. With such a group in charge, an administration can hardly help being a success.

It faces the most difficult problems that have been confronted since the Civil War. But some of the keenest intellects of the nation are at the president's elbow. If human brains can solve these questions they are going to do it.

The first test of superior ability is the power to size up human nature and make a wise selection o subordinates. The head of a big business does not do much else. He appoints brainy men to help him, and then lets them go ahead and they win success for him. A smaller man would work three times as hard, and then fail because he had the wrong heads of departments. Mr. Harding has proved that he knows how to make big decisions.

PROFESSIONAL POLITICIANS

Lt. Col. Theodore Roosevelt, addressing the Harvard College Union a few nights ago, told the students that the country needs more professional politicians. He felt that in any field of human effort a third rate professional accomplishes better results than even the best amateur. He encouraged the young men of Harvard to enter political careers.

One trouble with our politics is that many good men hate to "dirty their hands", as they express it, by engaging in this pursuit. They think a man can not win in politics unless he becomes subservient to a low class of men. Col. Roosevelt and his distinguished father have proved the contrary. A bright and capable man who has ideas of business, and can speak effectively in public, can win a place for himself without lowering high ideals.

THE GARDENLESS HOME

Newly arrived aliens often express surprise in their broken language at a country where comparatively few people cultivate a back yard garden. They speak of the industrious habits that used to prevail in the old world where people always expected to raise their own vegetables if they had a scrap of land to do it on.

This country, in its prodigal living, has largely got beyond the garden habit. Good work at food raising was done during the war, but the large majority of the novice gardeners had given up the practice by last summer.

Meanwhile many people loaf away their spare hours at their favorite hang-outs and declaim about the cost of food and maintain they are not getting a living wage. Some of them say they are too tired after their day's work to wield the hoe. But a lot of them would be physically improved by the out door work. It would place them on the beginnings of the road to prosperity.

Go To The Rescue

Don't Wait 'till It's Too Late—Follow the Example of a Westminster Citizen.

Rescue the aching back.

If it keeps on aching, trouble may come.

Often it indicates kidney weakness.

If you neglect the kidneys warning,

Look out for urinary disorders.

This Westminster citizen will show you how to go to the rescue.

Mrs. J. J. Hesson, 54 Pennsylvania Ave., says: "I suffered with a severe attack of kidney trouble and had severe pains accross my back. The pains were so great I couldn't take a deep breath or do anything. My head would ache too. Relatives told me of Doan's Kidney Pills and I procured a box at the Shaw Drug Co. I found immediate relief. I can recommend Doan's very highly and owe them a great deal. A kidney sufferer should use Doan's."

The above statement was given August 9, 1916, and on December 11, 1920, Mrs. Hesson added: "The cure Doan's Kidney Pills made for me has been a lasting one. I am always glad to recommend them."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Hesson had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

Candidate's Card For Sheriff

"To the Republican Voters of Carroll County".

I hereby announce that I am a candidate for the Republican nomination for Sheriff of Carroll County, and will submit my candidacy to the Republican voters of this County at the Primary Election to be held September next.

If nominated and elected to this office I promise a full and faithful discharge of the duties.

Two years ago I was a candidate for this nomination but in the interest of harmony I withdrew from the contest. I therefore feel that I am entitled to favorable consideration at this time.

Very respectfully submitted,

JOHN H. BOWMAN
Middleburg District.

IN MEMORIAM

Lemuel F. Brandenburg

In sad but loving remembrance of my dear son, and our brother, Carlton S., who was suddenly called away one year ago to-day, March 11, 1920.

Sometime, someday my eyes shall see
The face I love so well.
Some day his hand shall clasp in mine
And never say farewell.
By his father.

We have only a picture that's left of our brother
That hangs on the papered wall;
When the sunbeams sleep, and the moonbeams creep
Mid the glimmering thrown over all.

We've only a memory left of our dear brother
To cheer us this whole world through;
Thy smile, oh, my dear, in its tenderness here
Is all that we have now of you.
By his sister and brothers.
