TUESDAY, SEPT. 18, 1877.

T. K. ROBSON, Editor.

At the end of the [illegible] 30th, 1877, our exports [illegible] our importations, for the previous [illegible] $166,000,000. This large [illegible] is payable in gold, and the money [illegible] flowing into this country from Europe and depressing the [illegible] New York, bringing it down [illegible] cent. premium. [illegible] but this, this large [illegible] would flow into the [illegible] and stimulate [illegible] peculiar system of finance, it [illegible] country as fast as [illegible] to anybody, except those who sell [illegible] porters at a premium. [illegible] returned to us in merchandise instead of gold, or as there no balance of trade, the business would equal in amount the half of our present importation, and the chants would be largely benefited by the profits to be made upon the business, and the Government would derive some [illegible] 000,000 revenue [illegible] Government not only gains revenue from the importation of gold, but gets less revenue, because of the shrinkage of the importation trade; and what is still worse, this gold does not flow in unusual quantities into the Federal treasury. A financial system that produces such results must be radically defective. Because greenbacks are not received at the Custom houses for import duties, and merchants must have gold, with which to pay duties, the gold is held as a commodity, to be sold to the importing merchants, and therefore does not circulate as money. Were the Government to receive United States treasury notes and national bank paper at the Custom house for duties, the gold would have to circulate as money, or it would be of no use to the holder. This discrimination by Congress against the paper money issued by the Government, is the one cause of all our commercial woes. Correct this mistake, and there would cease to be any uproar about more or less money, as trade would regulate the matter, and the United States would soon have her full share of the gold of the world. It is monstrous that the balance of trade should bring into this country in one year, the enormous sum of $166,000,000, and not one dollar of it be available for trade, except in the single matter of paying duties on imports. We believe it would be impossible to devise a worse system of finance that ours, one more ruinous to all kinds of business. The greenback can never become interchangeable with gold until it is made of equal value at the custom house, and gold will never flow into the channels of business, to relieve the money market, as long as it commands a premium.

THE RING OF THE TRUE METAL.

The following is the letter of Hon. Robert M. McLane, accepting the nomination for State Senator, from the Second Legislative District of Baltimore city. We commend it to the calm consideration of the Workingmen, as containing the true Democratic doctrine on the issues raised by the Workingmen's Lyceums, and submit to their deliberate judgment, if they are not more likely to secure the reforms they desire, through the Democratic party under such leadership as the Hon. Robert M. McLane, who, in his long career as a politician, has ever been found true to the interests of the workingmen, than through a separate and independent organization, which cannot command a majority of either House of the State legislature.

(From the Baltimore Sun.)

Letter of Acceptance of Hon. Robert M. McLane.

[illegible] 1877.

John Gill, Jr., Esq., President Democratic Nominating Convention.—Dear Sir: Owing to absence from the city I have only now the opportunity to reply to your letter advising me that I had been unanimously nominated by the Democratic conservative convention for the second legislative district of Baltimore city as its candidate for State Senator.

Personal considerations would impel me to decline this nomination, notwithstanding the sentiment which has always inspired me to respond affirmatively to any call for service made upon me by my political friends, but, in view of the efforts to disrupt and disorganize the democratic party, I feel it to be a duty to accept the nomination, and in so doing to make my grateful acknowledgements for the honor it confers.

The present moment is one of great depression in trade and industry. Relief can only be obtained by a radical change of policy in the government, for that depression is the result of repugnant laws, rule and of vicious legislation. Excessive taxation upon every article of foreign and domestic manufacture in past years, together with the issue of millions of inconvertible paper money, so stimulated prices and credit that speculation in every branch of trade and industry, has ensued, and general disastrous losses have followed. Relief is sought to be found in another change, resulting, with the exception of a greater inflation of the currency, in the most [illegible] by taking off the artificial restraints which already have begun to bear fruit in a [illegible] and to bring to [illegible] from [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] and their adoption only can insure the return of prosperity to labor and capital.

I beseech the workingmen of the democratic party to give heed to these words, and to scrutinize closely the [illegible] and character of those who, professing to be their friends, stigmatize all who [illegible] in their exclusive political organization as corrupt and designing politicians. No man desires more earnestly than I do to promote their welfare. I [illegible] the citizen who fails to [illegible] and to advance their prosperity [illegible] will represent any interests in this community. But they are not workingmen only. They are citizens of this State and of the United States, and as such exercise a controlling influence upon the politics of this country. The evils of which they complain affect not only their interest but also the common interests of our whole people. The only relief which can [illegible] will bring the same blessing to capital and labor.

Labor and capital, acting together and in harmony, [illegible] the prosperity of this country. [illegible] upon each other, every [illegible] injury of both. When capital complains of the loss of [illegible] to its grievances because [illegible] not [illegible] from use and no longer [illegible] labor. When labor [illegible] around [illegible] only them if we [illegible] labor only that makes capital profitable, and the whole community depends upon the skill, employment and contentment of those who make capital productive. Labor and capital prosper [illegible] both are free and unfettered, but neither must use its natural power to oppress the other. This wise law [illegible] capital and the [illegible] of labor. Both are alike injurious to the community.

I do not dwell upon the occurrences which have recently occupied public attention in this State. The [illegible] which [illegible] them and which have been [illegible] to notice are [illegible] of [illegible] officers appointed by the Board of Public Works and by the city of Baltimore, and the recurrence of like difficulties may be prevented by proper legislation.

There is no [illegible] difficulties may not be adjusted in the manner in which [illegible] between workmen and their employers in [illegible] other countries. In England [illegible] is made by law for equitable [illegible] of conciliation, to which differences between workmen and their employers may be referred. In these courts the contending parties have a [illegible] voice, and an umpire, [illegible] if needed, can usually determine the question in dispute. [illegible] is needed to insure peace and prosperity in our community, and to feel assured about the [illegible] of the workingmen, [illegible] the country, was and [illegible] State by its careful [illegible] rights; and it will deserve success only so long as it protects and upholds them.

Yours very respectfully,

ROBERT M. MCLANE.

[illegible]

From our New York Correspondent.

[illegible] reported for the [illegible] The eclipse was a success in [illegible] which previous arrangements made between the man in the moon and the man in the observatory the performance began promptly at the appointed time. The entire programme was faithfully executed, and considering that there were no rehearsals much credit is due to Prof. Hall under whose [illegible] the show. Thinking that a more favorable view could be had in Central Park, where, divorced from the noise and bustle of city life, all would be peace and quiet, yours truly, decided to stage it early to enjoy the beautiful sunset and the phenomenon in the midst of nature and the solace of refreshing breezes. The attempt was a successful failure; successful as far as the sunset and moon were concerned, but a decided failure as to peace, quiet and refreshing breezes. It seems that many young ladies accompanied by their cousins took advantage of the opportunity to enjoy a pleasant walk in the park, a call on the lake or a [illegible] in the rustic bowers, and thereby enhance the fun of my game; they were all over and each couple appeared to be in similar chinese-twin-like affinity; they were no doubt protecting each other, however they seemed very little interested in the eclipse, or in the late discovery, that Mars has two moons—what a splendid place for a pic-nic! [illegible] everything I anticipated, all much that eclipsed my expectations. Besides the beauty of the scene, the sweet music of a full band (mosquitoes) added its enchantment. It has been urged by Jerseymen that cigar smoke does not agree with the digestive organs of these serenaders and tends to disperse them—this is a delusion—for acting on that hypothesis I soon found eight of them innocently enjoying a quadrille on the roadside clear, while six companions performed suitable accompaniment from "Robert il Diablis". I joined in the finale with both hands. My next "observations" will be made elsewhere, as I am convinced that Central Park has been surrendered to mundane pleasures. Every body was out on the streets or house tops with all sorts of instruments—telescopes, microscopes, eye-glasses, wine glasses, beer glasses, and those that failed to see the moon certainly saw "stars."

The great English Rifle Team selected to compete with our representatives for the Centennial trophy and if possible carry it across the ocean, were met in the lower bay, and are now among us. They are pleased with everything, you know, except the 'orrid 'ot weather and the beastly mosquitoes, you know. Arrangements have been made to change the weather and murder the mosquitoes. They are certainly very formidable opponents but as to the ultimate result public opinion is greatly in favor of the Americans whose average during practice have never been excelled. The excitement is intense and patience has really become a virtue. We will soon learn who knows most about trigger-nonchalancy.

The great event of the season in aquatic circles is the victory of Courtney over both Riley and Plaisted in a single scull race. The victor can now fairly claim the championship of America if not the world. He has rowed in seventy-three matches and has never yet been defeated; seventy-three is a good number to stop at.

A conspicuous star is evident among the "crooked" gents on account of the reputed capture of the persons engaged in the $64,000 and $27,000 forgeries of last winter, and at the same time comes the unpleasant information that some detectives working up the case were as "crooked" as their prisoners—perhaps another instance of "send a thief to catch a thief." What splendid detectives there must be in Washington, sacrificing themselves through patriotism instead of working for 80 cents a day!

John Brougham, the veteran actor, so much admired for his abilities as author and comedian, has announced his intention of bidding farewell to the stage which he has adorned for thirty-five years. He will "star" through the States and Great Britain in his own plays and return to New York to write his memoirs, which will no doubt be highly entertaining, for no one has been more closely allied to theatres since 1842 than he, whose sterling merits as an author, manager and actor have only been surpassed by his kind heartedness as a husband and nobleness as a man. It is undeniable that the elevation of the standard of American theatres is greatly due to his indefatigable exertions to purify them, and truly has he said that, considering the great temptations surrounding members of his profession they compare very favorably in morals with many ministers of the gospel—Beecher and Chedworth not excluded.

Troubles never come singly, as Mr. Packard, who was turned out of Louisiana, said when he was presented with twins, for at the same time comes the sad tidings of the death of Bendix Barr. He arrived here from England in 1839 at the age of nineteen and soon established himself as a thriving manager. He has passed away and naught remains but the memory of the many happy hours of pleasure spent in admiring him. With him the drama of life is finished, and the curtain separating him from his audiences forever has been rung down.

Our worthy President (?) with his Cripples from the Cabinet have deserted the highways and returned to Washington, the home of little wanderers. I wonder how Secretary Evarts feels after his visit to Concord in which we find the following lines in print; if he was there, and if to his hearers I guess the best [illegible] to Southerners like the idea of placing Postmaster General Key in the "stool of repentance" and [illegible] him as our "erring brother," but he has acknowledged being guilty of the atrocious crime of voting for a life long Democrat and voting against Mayor and other

THE INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION.

Mr. John Atherly, special agent of the International Exhibition Company, Philadelphia, was here last week, soliciting our fruit growers to send samples of fruit, especially peaches, for the special display, which takes place at the Exhibition hall, west Philadelphia, to-day and to-morrow. While [illegible] with we agreed advised. He said the last year's premiums offered by the company were very liberal, some as high as $50, and there would doubtless be a fine display of fruit. [illegible] farmers should have some samples to the display. There will also be a display of vegetables at the Exhibition in October, which will doubtless be as attractive as the display of fruit last week. Mr. Atherley is exerting himself very much, to get the Peninsula farmers to take an interest in the display of agricultural products projected by the International Exhibition Company.

The "Erring Brother" of the Post-Office Department, is to accompany Mr. Hayes to Southern states. [illegible]

Prudence often rules in the painful treatment of Babies. They are allowed to suffer and scream with pain from Colic, Flatulence, Bowel Disorders, etc., when some simple, reliable and safe remedy, as Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup, would give almost immediate relief and perfect ease to the little sufferer. Price 25 cents per bottle.

Whatever diminishes suffering is conducive to happiness; and perfect happiness is enjoyed only in perfect health. Health depends upon general organic work properly accomplished. Hence any functional disturbance is immediately felt, and is broken, the result of such disturbance of tender ones is the Digestive system, including a long list of painful and annoying complaints, which poison the Blood, debilitate the whole system, and finally sap the body. Keller's Vegetable Life Elixir are peculiarly efficacious in this class of diseases, gently correcting all abnormal tendencies.

In presenting to the Farmers the present season

PATAPSCO GUANO

And Patapsco Guano Mixture,

I have the advantage of practical personal experience and the testimony of all my friends who have used them, and I recommend them without hesitation; having used nearly all the best brands and high-priced mixtures, I find these manufactures above have paid me best, and they are much lower in price, lower than any other brands of uniform quality and equal good conditions.

As regards our brands, Guanos will decide the sale of fertilizers, and I urge my friends to try a sack of last year's Patapsco Guano. The results of a dozen sacks of Guano will be a fortune to the farmer, and knowing the Company as well as I do, I can guarantee that the same standard will be maintained.

JOHN K. CAULK.

The Proof!

Trappe, Talbot Co., July, 1877.

John K. Caulk:—I used Patapsco Grange Mixture and Guanos side by side, my yield is the best for years, and although the Peruvian cost so much more, the Grange Mixture did me quite as much good. The yield was about 30 bushels per acre. W. S. HAYES.

Trappe, July, 1877.

John K. Caulk—I used Farmer's Excelsior and Patapsco Grange Mixture; upon threshing if there was any difference in yield, I could not detect it, one doing quite as well as the other. Both used in equal quantities.

THOS. A. LEONARD.

John K. Caulk:—The Grange Mixture purchased of you paid me handsomely. It is a first-class article. W. H. PARROTT.

Trappe, July, 1877.

John K. Caulk:—I used Patapsco Grange Mixture broadcast on wheat, and the yield was satisfactory for one seeded. JAS. R. LEONARD.

Trappe, July, 1877.

John K. Caulk—Patapsco Grange Mixture is decidedly the best mixture I have ever used. With an application of 200 pounds per acre, I have made the best crop of wheat ever made on the land, and the grass is magnificent.

E. W. NORRIS.

Trappe, July, 1877.

John K. Caulk:—I used Patapsco Grange Mixture, and am satisfied that it is as good, to say the least, as any I have ever used; upon this orchard land I obtained 15 bushels for one seeded. My grass, where I used Grange Mixture, is far ahead of any I have ever seen, and the yield of wheat was large. WM. TULLIKIN.

[illegible] character of land.

Trappe, July, 1877.

John K. Caulk:—I used Patapsco Grange Mixture upon corn land, and have never made so much wheat upon the same land. It threshed out about 20 bushels to the acre.

R. L. MOSS.

McDaniel'town, July, 1877.

Dear Sir:—I used the Patapsco Grange Mixture on my crop of wheat last fall. My crop was about 23 bushels per acre, on corn land, the land being thin having just raised from it a very large crop of corn. I attribute my success partly to the use of the fertilizer drill, though in seeding my fertilizer at the rate of 200 pounds per acre. I think it paid at least 300 per cent. on money invested in it.

WM. KILOWE.

[illegible] July, 1877.

I used Patapsco Guano on my [illegible] and my yield is 550 bushels, from 43 seeded. I do not hesitate to say that this is the best fertilizer I have ever used, as the largest yield obtained from the [illegible] was 425 bushels.

JAS. T. WRIGHTSON.

Wittman's, July, 1877.

Dear Sir:—I used both Patapsco Guano and Patapsco Grange Mixture, I could see no difference whatever between them. My crop was a little over [illegible] bushels per acre.

I put my wheat in with the drill about the middle of October, ground very wet, so much so, it was impossible to properly prepare it. I used both Patapsco and Patapsco Grange Mixture, and am not prepared to say which did the most good, both doing so well; from 34 acres of fallow, (using 160 lbs Patapsco per acre,) I got 900 bushels of wheat, and think the army worm cut it short about 100 bushels. From 35 acres of corn land, using Patapsco and Grange Mixture side by side, I obtained 800 bushels, or about 26½ bushels per acre; from fallow, and 22½ bushels from corn land, the best yield I have had on this land, and I do not hesitate to repeat my former endorsement of these manures, as they are first-class in every particular. WM. L. WRIGHTSON.

July, 1877.

Dear Sir:—I used last fall upon my wheat, Patapsco and Patapsco Grange Mixture, I think the Patapsco the best I ever used, and believe the Grange equally as good in proportion to price. I have used Moro, Philips, Rhode's, Turner's Excelsior, and many others.

JAMES SETH, M. D.

St Michaels, July, 1877.

Dear Sir:—I used Patapsco and Patapsco Grange Mixture, applying 475 lbs on my best land, and 200 on corn land per acre, in the drill. My yield was 25 bushels per acre, of excellent quality. J. E. McDANIEL.

Bay Hundred, July, 1877.

Dear Sir:—I used Patapsco Guano on my wheat last fall, and am satisfied the fertilizer paid me handsomely. I have threshed, and the fertilized wheat yielded 50 per cent. more than where none was used. Actual measurement. JAMES K. DUNCAN.
