Gideon Welles, late Secretary of the Navy; "The Planet, Mars," by Captain Raymond of the United States Corps of Engineers, who was one of the transit of Venus expedition; an article by Captain E. Simpson, United States Navy, "On Modern Naval Warfare"; a striking story by Turgeneff. The above articles, with the departments, will make up a very brilliant number.

Special Notice.

All entries for the trotting races at the fair of the Talbot County Agricultural Society, which takes place on the 26th, 27th and 28th of September, inst., must be made, under cover, at THE EASTON STAR Office, by Saturday afternoon, the 22nd inst.

Delaware's Great Orator.

We understand that Senator Thomas F. Bayard, of Delaware, will deliver an address to the Talbot County Agricultural Society, on Friday, the 28th—the last day of the fair. Our people will be delighted to hear Delaware's great orator.

Hamburg Berries.

Wheat remains firm, and best Southern is quoted at from $1.58 to $1.60. Prime Corn, 67@68 cents Oats, 33 cents. Rye, 67 cents. Gold, $1.03½. The weather in England has been unfavorable to securing the wheat crop, and there is a prospect of an advance in price.

Fair and Cattle Show.

The Second Annual Fair of the Talbot County Agricultural Society will commence at Hamblerton Park on Wednesday, the 26th inst. There will be a fine display of stock, agricultural implements, domestic goods, flowers, vegetables, &c., and some splendid trotting.

New Enterprise.

Mr. Bailey Tomlinson, of Philadelphia, a worker in marble, has rented a house in town and moved his family here, with the intention of opening a marble yard in Easton. We should think the business ought to do here. We wish Mr. Tomlinson success. He comes just in time to be on hand and help to improve the new cemetery.

Democratic Ticket.

The following ticket has been nominated by the Democrats of Dorchester county. The nominating convention met last Tuesday:

For State Senator—Clement Sullivane.

For the House of Delegates—Joseph H. Johnson, Samuel M. Traverse, Dr. Isaac M. Houston.

For Sheriff—Robert H. Foxwell.

For County Commissioners—Thomas M. Meredith, William W. Mace, Martin A. Smith.

For County Surveyor—James M. Robertson.

If this ticket is not elected by an overwhelming majority, the Democrats of Dorchester might as well shut up shop and retire to the shades of private life. It is strong beth in point of intelligence and popularity.

The Opposition Boat No Accommodation.

The opposition steamboat company, which has been running the Raleigh on the Choptank river this summer, has either bought or chartered the steamer Georgeanna, to come to Eastern Point, in opposition to the Highland Light. She is advertised to run on the same days as the Highland Light. With all due respect to the owners of the Georgeanna, we must say we cannot see any accommodation in this. If the company wants to afford additional accommodation, it should run its boat on the days the Highland Light does not run. Both boats cannot make money. One of them must ultimately break down the other, and it is natural to suppose that the one that survives will at once increase its tariff, to make up for losses, and in the end the people will gain nothing. The Highland Light is as good a boat as we could ask; the Raleigh steamboat Company put down the fare some time ago to a fair price, and has always given Easton all the accommodation it could ask, and we see no reason why our people should withdraw their patronage from it because another boat comes on the line, not to accommodate accommodations, but simply as an opposition boat. And this reminds us of the two Irishmen who undertook to make rhymes on a wager. One said:

"As she slips, she slides along,
A trusty friend is hard to find."

"And faith," said the other, "that's no rhyme at all."

"If a friend you do find,
Never change him for a better."

There is more sense than poetry in the second Irishman's couplet, and we think our people would do well to reflect upon it before they abandon a boat that has served them so faithfully.

LORENTZ & SETTLER,
CHEMICAL & SUPER PHOSPHATE FACTORY,

As there are several parties claiming to be agents for the sale of our fertilizers in Talbot county, we desire it to be distinctly understood that we recognize Mr. Thomas C. Kemp, of Easton, as our Sole Agent for said County.

THE FITZGERALD MURDER MYSTERY.

Out of the Inquisition.

Discharge of Mrs. Wardell.

Will the Mystery Ever be Cleared Up?

The jury of inquest rendered their investigation of the Fitzgerald murder case on Saturday afternoon without discovering any clue to the key to the mystery of the murder, which is still as dark as ever. Mrs. Wardell was discharged from custody, there being no evidence to implicate her in the murder. Mr. Gibson, Esq., Miss's Attorney, who was sick on Sunday, did not personally recover sufficiently to attend the inquest on Thursday. He probed the matter to the bottom, as far as it could be probed before the jury, but all the mystery that surrounds the case. We are in hopes that an intelligent and experienced detective, under the direction of a Baltimore police, may be able to throw light on the case. We have no doubt that the guilty party would now be in jail. On Saturday morning, after the jury had been sworn, we found in a white china tea pot on the top shelf of a very old cupboard, standing in one corner of the house in which Mr. Fitzgerald was murdered. It was discovered through a dream. On Wednesday afternoon, after Willie Jackson had Mr. Sewell that on Sunday night she dreamed that the money was in a tall cupboard in Mrs. Waddell's house wrapped up in a sugar bag. She had told the dream at the time, and on Monday morning, On Wednesday night, William Sewell told his father, Thomas S. Sewell, about Miss Jackson's dream. On Thursday morning the latter went to Mr. N. C. Fitzgerald (the Fitzgerald family in Hill) not any where near the house) and the two Sewells searched the cupboard in the Fitzgerald house, and there found the money—$ silver, made dollars, just as in the bag they were received in from California, and $5 in gold money. Six five and one $10 note. We think it probable this is all the money Mrs P had by her. When she was murdered, that the assassin's got nothing for the crime they committed, except the pair of pants, which they lost on the road to Lewistown, the night of the murder. Mr. John Porter, one of the witnesses before the inquest, testified that he met a man with a light in the house where the murder was committed, about 11 o'clock, on the night of the murder, and he passed it coming from Easton. Mr. Hitchenhouse said he called at the house the morning after the murder, to inquire about the road to Hillsboro' (or, but get no answer, and was afterwards told which road to take by Joseph Waddell. We think the authorities should not let this witness leave town without first examining every available means to discover the murderer.

BOLD ATTEMPT TO ROB AND MURDER

The Plans of the Assassins Defeated.

Mr. Charles Underwood lives on Mr. William T. Elliott's farm, on the Choptank river, between Dover Bridge and Barker's Landing, in this county. On Saturday night he and his wife were waked about 12 o'clock by a loud noise, who, broken into his house and was trying to enter his bed room, on the ground floor. Mr. Underwood jumped out of the bed and went to the door, to find that Mr. Chs. Lambourn had no gun or pistol in his bed room. Instead of leaving the scoundrels alone, he made a desperate effort to get in, and actually forced the door open, while Mr. Underwood was pushing against it to keep out. As soon as they got in, they struck at Mr. Underwood with a hatchet, but the hatchet striking the top of the door frame, flew out of the assassin's hand, and was lost in the dark. A young fight then ensued between Mr. Underwood and the assassins, and Mrs. Underwood coming to his assistance with a stick, one of them took the stick out of her hand and knocked her down with it. Although it was quite dark in the room, Mr. Underwood says he knows they were negroes both by their smell and hair, which he had hold of. They were both bareheaded, and had on ragged clothes. Two ladies who slept up stairs heard the noise below, and started to the rescue and the negroes hearing them coming, left the house and ran out a lane. Mr. Underwood got his gun and followed, but did not get a shot at them. The next morning he took the hatchet around the neighborhood, to see if any body could identify it. Meeting Mr. James E. Frampton, he inquired of him if he knew whose hatchet it was? without telling him anything about the attempted murder. Frampton said "Yes, I copied that hatchet not a great while ago and traded it with Jim Green (a negro living in the neighborhood) for a hammer." In reply to an inquiry to that effect, Mr. Frampton said he would swear to it. Mr. Underwood then told him the facts in regard to the house-breaking. He then came to town and sued out a writ before Justice Stewart against Green, and had him lodged in jail. Mr. Underwood does not yet know who Green's confederate is, but hopes to catch him. There is no doubt that the negroes intended to murder the whole family and rob the house, supposing Mr. Underwood had money. Their carrying the hatchet with them, and their persisting in forcing their way in after they were discovered, and striking at Mr. Underwood with the deadly weapon at sight as they got the door open, discloses their murderous intention. It came very near being a repetition of the Fitzgarrell murder. It is to be hoped that both the scoundrels will be caught and punished to the full extent of the law.

The Pantry Thieves Still Active.

The pantry thieves in town are still active, and are growing bolder. On Wednesday Mr. Jacob Williams moved to the house lately vacated by Mrs. Roberts. He did not get through moving before they broke into his pantry and robbed it of a quantity of preserves and other things. The same evening they attempted to rob Mr. Myers again, but were heard and run off. On Thursday night they robbed Mrs. Roberts' pantry of a coal oil lamp. On Friday night they were discovered breaking into Mrs. Forman's pantry, and scared off before they completed the job. On Sunday night, about 11 o'clock, while Mr. Bailiff Rathell was going the rounds of the town, some one attempted to break into his house; but his family was stirring, and calling to the neighbors, scared the scoundrel away. Mr. Alfred Dawson, who has just gone to housekeeping, found them making a raid upon his premises, and salted them with a load of buckshot. We think it about time the town commissioners were giving the matter their diligent attention.
