For Comptroller of the State Treasury,
THOMAS J. KEATING,
OF QUEEN ANNE'S COUNTY.

COUNTY TICKET.

EX-GOV. PHILIP F. THOMAS,
GEN. HUMPHREY F. HARDCASTLE.

For Sheriff,

WILLIAM WILLIS,
JOSEPH HORNEY.

For County Surveyor,
DR. JOSEPH A. ROBINSON.

The excitement over the Morton swindle in Philadelphia has not subsided, before another equally as bad was detected in New York. William O. Gilman, an insurance broker, sunday school teacher, and chorister, has gone through the richest men of Wall Street for several hundred thousand dollars, by forging raised stock certificates and hypothecating them for cash, and then making his escape. The North appears to be rotten, to the core. It is the same old story with saving bank, insurance companies, trust estates, and individual business men. It is who shall steal the most. Were our bank note circulation not secured by deposites of U. S. bonds with the Government, our financial system would be by this time as rotten as the insurance companies and saving banks, and no man holding a note would feel satisfied of the solvency of the bank that issued it. In these days of general thieving, suppose our banking system was no better than it was before the war, with any and everybody with capital free to start a bank, without giving any security for the circulation: what a saturnalia of rascality would now be going on in the country, among bankers. Wild cat banks would be as plentiful as blackberries, and their notes would be worth about as much per pound as autumn leaves. The national banking system of Mr. Chase has been the salvation of the country's circulating medium. Thelying bank presidents, cashiers and tellers, may steal the deposits in their banks, but they cannot, by any amount of stealing, impair the value of the national bank notes, which circulate among the people, and are effectually secured by the Federal Government. When we hear people crying out against the national banks, we sometimes think it would do them good, if they could only live a short time in the present degenerate days, and do business somewhere, where the bank notes were not guaranteed, with their pockets stuffed with worthless bank notes, and swindling bank officers and ex-bank officers and wild cat bank stockholders all around them, rolling in ill-gotten wealth; with no confidence in the solvency of the money in circulation; it is likely they would soon cry out for national banks, with a circulation guaranteed by the Government. Judge Chase may have many sins to answer for, for the part he played in bringing on the late war, but the people have good cause to thank him for furnishing them a guaranteed currency as good as the Government itself, and absolutely beyond the power of the Gilmans, the Mortons, the clews, the Jay Cookes or other thieves to render valueless. It is a great thing for the business of the country that the paper in circulation should be as good as gold, and not be liable to be materially depreciated by the schemes of dishonest men.

We print this morning the proceedings of the Democratic Convention which met here last Tuesday to make nominations, and the ticket nominated. The nominees for the Senate and House of Delegates are too well known in this county to require an introduction. The ability of the ticket is conceded by all. The candidate for sheriff is a new man before the people, but he has long been a hard worker in the corn-field, and in the party. Mr. Griffin is from Trappe, and is not only the Democratic candidate, but he is emphatically the workingmen's candidate. If elected, and there is no doubt of his election, he will faithfully discharge the duties of his office, and make a good sheriff. Mr. Wooters, of chapel, nominated for county commissioner, has declined. Mr. Willis, is a citizen of St. Michaels, and one of the best business men in the place. He is capable and honest, and will make an able an efficient county commissioner. It is the first time he has been before the people. When they know him better they will want him again. Mr. Horney is a capable, honest and successful farmer of Bay Hundred. He has developed capacity to manage his own affairs carefully and successfully, and will be equally careful and successful of the affairs of the county, should the people ratify his nomination. He will make a good commissioner. Dr. Robinson, the candidate for county surveyor, is well qualified to discharge the duties of the office, should he find anything to do after he is elected. Hitherto, unfortunately for those who have been elected surveyors, there has been very little work done in their line. We trust the case will be different under Dr. Robinson's administration of the office. He is a clever man, and will make a good poll, and probably bring himself into notice for something better hereafter. With this brief introduction of the new men on the ticket, we leave it for the present to speak for itself.

The Republican's meet to-day to nominate their ticket. It is now reported that Dr Samuel A. Harrison may probably be their candidate for State Senator. It may be the Doctor would like to spend a couple of Winters at Annapolis, to afford him an opportunity to search the public records for material for his forthcoming Annals of Talbot County," but with Col. Lloyd in the field against him, we opine he is not likely to go there in Senatorial robes at the public expense. However, with parties as evenly balanced as they are in this county, there is no telling what misfortune may happen. If the Doctor, who is the strongest Republican in the county, should be the Republican candidate for the Senate, the Democrats will only have to work the harder to defeat him. Should he win nothwithstanding their extra efforts, it is gratifying to know that Talbot will have a talented Senator, one that will make a most efficient member of the committee on education. But we scarcely think the Republican wire-pullers of this county are disinterested enough to nominate their best man for the Senate. The nomination is more likely to be conferred upon some tenth rate politician, whose election would reflect credit neither upon the party or the county.

DEMOCRATIC COUNTY CONVENTION.

The Democratic county convention, to nominate a ticket, met at Easton last Tuesday. Joseph B. Seth was appointed temporary chairman, and Wm. Hayward temporary secretary. After the organization, the following delegates were reported as entitled to seats:

Mr. Harrison moved that General H. F. Hardcastle be nominated in place of Col. Hambleton.

Mr. Seth moved as a substitute, that the convention proceed to ballot for a candidate to fill the vacancy.

THE NEWS.

There was a large fire in New York Wednesday night, which distroyed a city railway depot and ninety street cars.

The Russian Campaign in Bulgaria is about over for the season, and Plevna is not taken. The Czar has been baffled, if not whipped. The Russians will winter in Bulgaria, if not driven across the Danube by the Turks. The Czar has ordered a railway to be built from the Danube as far into Bulgaria as the Russian lines extend. Also huts for 150,000 men, and hospitals for 15,000 wounded. This looks as if he intends to protract his visit to that inhospitable country. The Russians have accomplished very little in Asia. "The King of France, with forty-thousand men Marched up the hill, and then marched down again."

And that is just about what the Russians have done in Armenia. They say they withdrew to suppress an insurrection in Daghestan. It is likely Russia will continue to have insurrections among her Mahomedan populations as long as she is at war with the Sultan, the head centre of the Mohomedan faith.

The workingmen's party in Baltimore are waging an active campaign against all other parties. However, it is not thought that they will be able to defeat Col. George P. Kane, who is the Democratic candidate for Mayor.

An Unfortunate Family Reunion.

The Pennypackers, descendants of old Hendrick Pennypacker, who settled in Pennsylvania early in Colonial times, numbering about 1200 from all parts of the United States, had a re-union at the old Pennypacker homestead, near Schwenksville last Thursday, to celebrate the centennial of the battle of Germantown, Gen. Washington having held his council of war at the Pennypacker mansion that determined to fight the battle of Germantown. After the reunion, a portion of the party, numbering about 200, started for home on the Pickering Valley railroad, and the rain having washed away a part of the road near Phœnixville, the train in the darkness of the storm on Thursday night, was precipitated down an embankment forty feet deep, telescoping two of the passenger cars, and killing 9 passengers and badly wounding between 40 and 50 others. The passenger coaches and locomotive were badly wrecked.

HAYES TITLE NOT GOOD.

George William Curtis, editor of Harper's Weekly, and big gun of the Hayes Republicans of New York, offered a resolution at the late Republican State Convention of New York as follows: that "the lawful title of R. B. Hayes to the Presidency is as clear and perfect as that of George Washington" The resolution was rejected by a vote of 296 nays to 109 yeas. Now, title to the Presidency can only be good or bad. George Washington's title was good. According to a large majority of the New York Republican Convention, Mr. Hayes' title is bad. This is what everybody knows and believes, and Senator Conkling proved himself honest in not allowing the Convention to affirm a falsehood at free. Hayes' title is not by popular election according to the constitution, but only an 8 by 7 title, obtained through the Electoral Commission that refused to go behind the false returns from Florida and Louisiana.

In referring to the Democratic nominations in this county, the Baltimore Gazette of last Wednesday pays Gov. Thomas the following handsome and just compliment. It says: "the services which Ex-Gov. Thomas has rendered to his State and the Country at large during the course of his brilliant career in the Legislature, in Congress, as Governor, and as Secretary of the Treasury under Buchanan are historical. Although in his sixties now, he still retains his intellectual and physical vigor, and his recent speech at the Maryland Institute meeting was full of eloquence and wisdom."

Correspondence of the Star.

WASHINGTON, D. C., October 5, 1877.

Congress meets in extra session on the 15th and from present appearances Hon. Samuel J. Randall will be elected Speaker of the House, although Messrs Cox, Blackburn and Taylor each have a strong following. The President feels confident that his Southern policy will be endorsed by Congress, notwithstanding the opposition of Senator Conkling. But little concern is felt in administration circles respecting the action of the N. Y. State Republican Convention, for the President is too well aware how political conventions may be manipulated by such shrewd managers as Senator Conkling.

President Hayes is now engaged in preparing his message for the Extra Session. His late trips to the East, West and Southwest were really intended to examine into the true condition of the country, to see and converse with leading business men in different parts of the land, with a view to satisfy himself what is the best to be done to remove the depression in business and restore general prosperity. He collected much valuable information, which will help him to form correct conclusions; and the result of his reflections thereon will be laid before Congress in the message. The paper will be a surprise to a great many politicians, for it will deal with practical business questions and not with party jargon. I fortunately have it in my power to send the STAR in advance the most important points of the message, which has not yet been written out in full.

As the failure of the last session to pass the Army appropriation bill is the cause of the extra session, affairs connected with the army will be elaborately discussed, and strong ground taken against any reduction of the army, and the President will show conclusively that not a man can be spared, if our extensive Indian frontier is to be guarded and settlers protected. The late railway strike will be referred to as showing the importance of having large bodies of troops near the great centres of population, to protect the lives, liberties, and property of the people from destruction by an infuriated mob. When we think ourselves most secure, recent events show that a burning volcano may be seething under our feet, ready to overflow and send destruction right and left; and that security is only to be found in a sufficient military force to promptly suppress insurrection, however formidable.

The President will deal gliardedly with the greenback question, and very properly refer it to the wisdom of Congress; but he will take strong ground in favor of a repeal of the law demonetizing silver. He will advocate making both gold and silver legal tender, and recommend the coinage of silver at the mint until the supply equals the demand for it. If the Republicans of the East refuse to accede to this policy, their party will undoubtedly lose the West in 1880, for California, Nevada, and Colorado have too large an interest in the great silver "Bonanzas" to sustain any party that opposes their interests in this particular. The president is aware of this, and will strongly urge that silver be made legal tender, and all restrictions on its coinage removed, although he will not discuss the matter from a party stand-point.

The claims of the Southern Pacific Railroad will be laid before Congress, and Mr. Hayes will argue in favor of the road from a military standpoint, and he will show its vital importance to the country as a military road, in the event of another war with Mexico. There is great force in this view of the matter, and the construction of this road, and the repair of the levies on the Mississippi river at the government expense, is an important part of his Southern policy, yet to be developed, and relied upon by the President to demoralize the Democratic party of the South, should the Democrats oppose the policy. The people living along the Mississippi river are too poor, and too deeply in debt, to repair the levies at their own expense, and their States have not the credit to raise the money to do it, and they are looking to Congress to do it for them, and they will go with that party that is best able to help them in a matter so vital to their prosperity and the prosperity of the whole country.

The President is very anxious to bring gold into circulation again as money, and he will bring the matter to the attention of Congress in his message, not by talking about the myth of "specie resumption," but by suggesting practical measures to bring it about. He thinks it can be done, either by restoring the Sub-Treasury system, as it was practiced before the war—collecting all revenue in gold, and paying it out at par for the ordinary expenses of the Government, or by collecting all revenue in greenbacks and national bank notes, and thus breakdown the market for gold. He has not yet decided which policy to recommend, but at present inclines to the latter, as better adapted to the existing financial situation and Western views. He is relying upon the West and South to sustain his administration, and does not care to conciliate the East in this matter, as he depends on another, and more important question, to bring the East into line, namely the shipping question.

The President is very much concerned about the great falling off of American tonage engaged in foreign commerce, since the Republican party came into power, and during his late trip North, he conversed freely with intelligent business men with a view to fathom the cause of it. He is now satisfied that one of the chief causes of decline, is the high tariff laid upon imported articles which are used in the construction of vessels. He will recommend to Congress that these duties be reduced, so that vessels may be built in the United States as cheaply as in Canada or England. There are many millions of dollars annually made out of the freights upon American imports and exports, and these millions now principally go into the pockets of the foreign ship owners. The President thinks, and thinks wisely, that it would be much better, if the profits on this enormous pile of freight—mostly gold—enured to the benefit of American ship-owners and American sailors. He thinks, too, that it may require some extraordinary measure to resuscitate the ship building business. A 20 per cent drawback on all duties paid on goods imported in American bottoms, he thinks would cause our merchants to give preference to American built ships, and would stimulate the business of ship building and soon restore our merchant marine to its former prosperity and eminence. The revival of ship building would revive a hundred kindred industries, which are now either languishing or defunct, among which not the least important are the lumber and iron industries. It would give employment to thousands of worthy mechanics and laborers who are now idle but anxious for work.—This subject will be ably presented to Congress.

The President has for sometime been impressed with the importance of suppressing stock gambling. The brokers engaged in it produce nothing, absorb a very large amount of capital, are a perpetual nuisance to honest business men, by constantly unsettling values, and are eternally and forever creating panics. He is satisfied that the country would be very largely the gainer, if selling stocks, gold, or produce on a margin were broken up by Act of Congress. The matter will be discussed in the message. He thinks no sales for cash should be interfered with; that legitimate dealings in stocks, gold and produce should not be interfered with, on the produce or stock exchanges, but that what is known as gambling in them should cease. The President will make a "corner" on the Wall street brokers in his message, that will astound them even more than did the celebrated "Black Friday." The message will create a greater sensation throughout the country than any similar paper that has been sent into Congress since the foundation of the Government. That portion of it referring to our foreign relations has not yet been reduced to writing, and it is probable the subject will be dismissed with a paragraph, and postponed until the beginning of the regular session, as domestic questions at this time are considered as of paramount importance.

CAPITOL.

A CARD.

To the Democratic County Convention:

GENTLEMEN:—At the solicitation of many personal and political friends, I consented to allow the use of my name as a candidate before your honorable body, for the position of Delegate for Talbot county in the next General Assembly of Maryland. I did so with the positive understanding, that should my name fail to meet the approval of the Convention for said position, that it be immediately withdrawn, as I did not wish to contest for a place to which other gentlemen had already been recommended.

I therefore, in justice to my friends, most respectfully decline to accept the honor you have so kindly conferred upon me as a candidate for the office of County Commissioner.

With the highest respect, I am very respectfully yours, &c.,

JAMES M. WOOTERS.

ERRATUM.

By not detecting what the printers call an "out" in our proof last week, in the article respecting Gov. Thomas' visit to Baltimore, our types made us say the reverse of what we wrote. The article should have read, "Gov. Thomas went to Baltimore expressly to aid in turning the labor tide, which has been running against the Democratic party," whereas, by the omission of the words, "which has been running," the article said he went to Baltimore to turn the labor tide "against" the Democratic party. Of course the intelligent reader perceived there was a typographical error, as that part did not harmonize with the spirit of the balance of the article. It is proper that we should make the correction, to prevent misrepresentation hereafter.
