MANCHESTER

KLUNK—ABKIN NUPTIALS

The family of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel H. Abken were astirr early on Monday morning, it being the bridal day of their daughter Garaphelia. She, with the groom to be, Lewis Martin Klunk, and her parents and a company of friends left at 6 A. M. and motored to Saint Mary's Church, McSherrystown, Pa., where they were married by Father Rendter, in the presence of a large company of friends. After hurried congratulations they returned here to the home, accompanied by a number of the groom's relatives, to a wedding breakfast at 9 A. M. The bride was dressed in white satin, with hat and gloves to match, and carried a bouquet of bride's roses. Her attendant was dressed in blue canton crepe, carried a bouquet of pink roses and wore a black picture hat. The groom and best man wore the conventional black.

The breakfast was served in three courses. The table appointments were first class and the menu measured up to them in every respect (the Belvedere was not in it) for it did honor to the occasion that all enjoyed. The bride and groom and some friends left right after being served to make a run on a prearranged trip and return on Tuesday evening to their home which the groom had furnished and in readiness for them, where the parents and a number of the bride's friends from here will enjoy a reception. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Abkin, Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Klunk, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. A. Abkin, son and daughter, Father Rendter, Roy Smith, David Klunk, Felix Klunk, Mr. and Mrs. John Klunk, Emma Copper, Mary Laurence, Paul Smith, (best man) Mr. and Mrs. George Theiret, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Armacost, Edna and son, Mamie Schmidt, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Trump and daughter Nellie, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bollinger, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lippy, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Boose, Miss Varnet Ensor, G. W. J. Everhart, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burgoon and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George Rusk, Mrs. J. C. Keck and Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Yingling. The bride and groom were sent away amid a shower of rice in a decorated car in white and blue with a drag of old shoes, tin cans etc.

Mr. and Mrs. Tilden G. Zepp, of Baltimore, were week-end guests at the home of uncle Tom and aunt Maggie Shaffer, North of town, enjoying the fat of the land.

We had snow all day Friday 21st. The flakes disappeared when they struck the ground. A heavy frost next morning calling for warm stoves and heavy wraps and concern about the fruit in blossom.

The concert by the P. O. S. of A. Band, of Hanover, on Friday evening, was fine, the attendance good, and from the enthusiastic applause the audience was well entertained. After the concert refreshments were served the members. At the financial end the band had a full plus and the committee for the fire company a less than a minus.

Samuel Frederick moved his hardware store from Foundry avenue to his home on South Main street, formerly the Franklin House.

Mrs. Frank Brilhart is still closely confined to her room unable to walk and speechless.

The Nace's Music store on South Main street has been closed and the stock moved to Hanover.

Mrs. Cornelius Miller, of Baltimore, is a guest at the home of Miss Fannie G. Ross, meeting her old neighbors and friends.

Mrs. D. G. Everhart and daughter Nannie, of Frederick, were guests during the week of their grandma, Mrs. Washington Musselman.

Ernest Brilhart has taken a position with the Commercial Credit Company, of Baltimore. He is to be one of their traveling men.

Lamar Hoffman has equipped himself with a heavy truck to do hauling of all kinds, far or near. Give the boy a call.

The man who can hardly speak above a whisper at a public meeting may almost be able to yell the roof off the grand stand at the ball game.

The time has gone by when you could please the girls with a five cent bag of pop corn, but sometimes they look tolerantly on a $2.00 box of candy.

If a fellow is going to train with the modern flapper, he finds he has to spend something besides the evening.

Formerly the office boy used to get away to the ball games by having to attend his grandmother's funeral, but in these times the boss has precious little sense of family obligations.

FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

ASBESTOS A BUSY SPOT

The Congoleum Company's plant at Asbestos, this county, is now a busy one. Mr. Harry C. Bell, the manager, who, with his family and mother, resides at The Westminster, this city, has a full force of competent assistants who render excellent service in the operation of the plant.

The company's yearly consumption of coal amounts to 32,400 tons, or 648 carloads, which would require a train four miles long. The yearly output of the factory is 20,000 tons of felt making 1100 carloads, requiring a train eight and a half miles long.

Operates By Electricity.

The plant is run by electricity with a 3,530-horsepower or 2,650-kilowat capacity plant.

This plant does not manufacture the finished product, but is in turn conveyed to others of the concern's plants where the felt here produced is converted into the widely advertised floor covering.

When the rags are received they are sorted for the removal of metal and other obpectionable materials, and are then fed to a giant Taylor-Stiles rag cutter driven by a 75 horsepower motor running 700 revolutions a minute and cutting eight to ten tons an hour. The cut rags are conveyed to the floor above where they are fed to beaters. The room contains 17 of these machines with a total rated capacity of 17,300 pounds.

The rags on entering the beaters are soaked in water and by the macerating action of the machinery converted into pulp, which, in turn, goes into the beaters' stuff chests. Thence the pulp is pumped into riffle boxes, which remove all foreign substances from it. Then it goes into the Jordan engines where the pulp is brushed out or refined and whence it goes to the screens, which are composed of moving diaphragms vibrated by cams. By the aid of suction the pulp is made to pass through slots 24-1,000 of an inch wide before it is allowed to enter the finished product on the machine.

Is Formed On Machines.

The stock after leaving the screens enters the vat, where it is taken up and formed on the cylinder felt machines. Here it is molded into a continuous sheet by the difference in head between the stock-laden water in the vat and that maintained in the cylinder mold. Then it is picked up on a continuous woolen blanket and carried over the machine between press rolls to remove the water and on to the steam-heated dryers, which remove all moisture.

The dry sheet is then passed through calender rolls and cut the desired width, when it is rolled and finished for shipping to the company's finished floor coverings.

The other plants of the company are located at Marcus Hook, Pa.; at Camden and at Salem, N. J., and at Montreal, Quebec.

The manager of the Baltimore plant is Harry C. Bell. The concern's headquarters are at Philadelphia. The officers of the company are: F. B. Foster, president; A. W. Erickson, vice-president; L. W. Fogg, treasurer; A. E. Van Bibber, secretary.

The speeding motorists can't understand why people will cross the streets and get hurt when they would be perfectly safe if they stayed on the sidewalks.

The politicians can't seem to pass the legislation the people want, but anyway they are getting the offices distributed.

The fellows who spend their energy embracing the girls at the petting parties, are not usually the ones who embrace their business opportunities.

The Young Dr. Claud

By DOROTHY WHITCOMB

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

Claud Arthur Sherwin might be an M. D. of Johns Hopkins and the leader of his class in the medical schools, but so long as he lived in Lovell he would never be known as anything more than Dr. Claud. The elder Dr. Claud, his father, had ushered three-fourths of Lovell into the world, and no other doctor would have any chance to hang out his shingle within the radius of old Dr. Claud's buggy and high-stepping horses. So young Dr. Claud came home to take over his father's practice without having to fight his way to an income.

It was on the fourth or fifth day after young Dr. Claud's arrival that the telephone rang furiously. Young Dr. Claud was alone in the office. He took down the receiver.

"Is that Dr. Claud?" inquired a woman's voice in agitation. "Oh, young Dr. Claud. Well, I'm Miss Mary Denton, and Mrs. Quinn is in great trouble. Her maid has swallowed sulphate of antimony by mistake for a prescription. Yes, she's here and has asked me to telephone for her. You know Mrs. Quinn's house—the third house across the brook. Good-bye."

Hastily he threw a few things into his bag, mixed a draught of mustard and milk, and set off as fast as he could to walk along the road. Once over the brook he soon saw Mrs. Quinn's house standing in a little grove of trees. He hurried up the drive.

There was nobody in the kitchen, but in the dining room he saw a woman stretched out upon a lounge, apparently insensible. He opened his bag, uncorked the liquid, and, forcing the girl's mouth open, tried to pour the noxious draught down her throat.

She sat up spluttering.

"What—what—" she began to stammer, and then suddenly a smile broke through the tears of laughter that came into her eyes.

"Oh my dear doctor," she exclaimed, "what a dreadful mistake. You are looking for Mrs. Quinn's maid. She lives across the road. You came to the wrong house. You'd better hurry."

"But the mustard is all gone," stammered young Dr. Claud.

"Then I'll mix some more," volunteered the young woman. "Come into the kitchen."

But as he arose young Dr. Claud saw the family buggy draw up across the street and his father descend, together with a very agitated middle-aged woman. The young lady saw it, too.

"That's Mrs. Quinn," she said. "I guess she found your father and has brought him there."

"Then I'd better go," stammered young Dr. Claud. He took his hat. "You are Miss Denton, aren't you?" he hazarded.

"Yes, of course I am. I'll wager you have never thought of me since you went to Baltimore."

"Indeed I have," replied young Dr. Claud warmly. His hand went into his pocket and he pulled out a broken coin. "Do you remember this," he asked. "You said you were going to keep the other half until—"

Miss Mary Denton's hand had gone up involuntarily to her throat. She tried to stop the action, but it was too late. There hanging upon a chain, young Dr. Claud saw the other half of the coin. And for the second time within five minutes Miss Denton's cheeks turned scarlet.

"Now you go," she said, pushing him toward the door. "I don't think our meeting has been a very happy one, Dr.—Dr. Claud."

But although he found himself almost violently excluded from the house young Dr. Claud was singularly happy—so much so that his father commented upon his appearance when he came out of the house.

"You certainly don't look like a man who has just been beaten in the race for his first patient," he said. "It's lucky I was on the spot, Claud. Just saved her in time. Mrs. Quinn told me she telephoned you half an hour ago."

"I—I went to the wrong house," faltered young Dr. Claud.

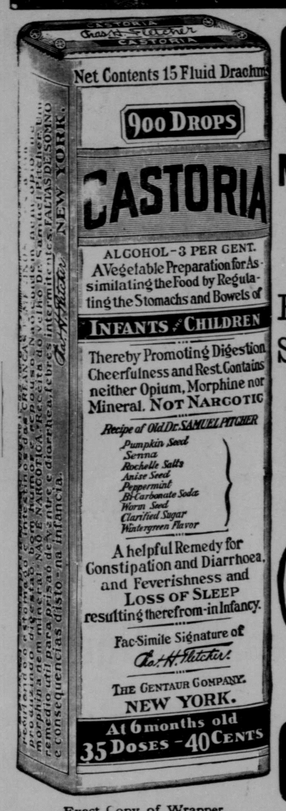

"Humph!" growled his father. "You seemed to be coming from the direction of Miss Denton."

Old Dr. Claud was about to twit his son a little longer, but when he looked at him again something made him check himself abruptly. Miss Mary was a favorite of his, and he had hoped that after Claud settled down in Lovell—well, it was one of those dreams in which old men indulge in their idle moments. And as the weeks rolled by he was encouraged to go on dreaming it.

And when young Dr. Claud, with Mary on his arm, came into old Dr. Claud's office and, stammering, said that he had something very important to communicate, old Dr. Claud found that he could only press his son's hand and kiss Miss Mary's blushing cheeks. Because his dream had really come to pass and the Lovell practice seemed likely to become hereditary.

Emeralds Have a "Boom."

The choice of emeralds for Princess Mary's engagement ring caused a boom in those stones in England, says a London dispatch. The square-cut emerald is the most fashionable and the most expensive. Emeralds are dearer than diamonds and run from £70 to £80 a karat up to £600 a karat for stones free from flaws, which are extremely rare.

Dizziness Is Annoying

As Many Westminster People Know Too Well.

When the kidneys are weak or disordering, they fall behind in filtering the blood of poisons. As these poisons attack the nerves, the result is felt in spells of vertigo, just as drunkenness will make a man dizzy from the poisoning of alcohol. Dizziness, headache, backache and irregularly of the kidney secretions are all signs of weak or disordered kidneys and should not be neglected. Use Doan's Kidney Pills, the home-endorsed kidney remedy. Read this Westminster resident's statement:

Mrs. Grover Cole, 23 Johns St., says: "My kidneys were weak and I had severe backaches and dull pains across my kidneys so I could hardly keep going. When I stooped I became dizzy and spots floated before my eyes. My kidneys acted too often. A friend advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills and they helped me from the first. I continued to use them until I was free from all signs of the trouble."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Cole had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.
