HAWTHORNE'S LITTLE FOLKS.

In silence I must take my seat,
And give God thanks before I eat;
Must for my food in patience wait,
Till I am asked to hand my plate.
I must not scold, for when I'm cross,
Nobody wishes to play with me.
With knife or fork, or slipping ring
I must not play, nor must I sing.
I must not speak a naughty word,
Or the bed maid is sent in a hurry.
I must not talk about my food,
Nor feel if I don't think it good.
My mouth with food I must not crowd,
Nor while I'm eating speak aloud.
Must turn my head to cough and sneeze,
The table cloth I must not soil,
Nor with my food my fingers soil.
Must keep my seat when I am done,
Nor round the table spurt or run.
When rose is offered I must not
Say what I like with noisiness,
And lift my heart to God above,
In praise for all his wondrous love.

A Valuable Property.

Harvey's reminiscences of Daniel Webster, just published, contains the following:

"Webster on one occasion, in payment of his fee for legal services, a small farm in the neighborhood of the White Mountains, New Hampshire. He left the tenant, who was living there at the time, in possession. After his removal to Boston he heard nothing of his White Mountain estate for several years. One summer, as he journeyed northward with his wife, in quest of recreation, he resolved to turn aside from the beaten road, to ascertain the true condition of his property. He found a very miserable hut upon it, occupied by a miserable woman as the only tenant of his farm. He asked for a glass of water, which was readily served in a tin dipper. He then began to make inquiries about her prosperity, and the present condition of things about her. She said that she did not own the farm, but that it belonged to a lawyer down in Boston by the name of Webster.

"Does he often come to see you, my good woman?" said Mr Webster.

"No," replied she, "he has never been near his land since I lived here."

"But did he not send some one to see how you pay for the occupancy of his farm?"

"Land!" she exclaimed, "I don't pay him any rent. It is hard enough to live here without paying anything for it; and if he don't fix up the house I don't mean to stay here freezing to death much longer."

"Well, madam," returned the kind-hearted proprietor, "it is a pretty hard case, I confess. If you will accept this bill (five dollars) toward your holding on for another year, I will speak to Mr. Webster when I next see him, and perhaps he will do something more for you."

Bridget took the leaf of this valuable friend and interesting tenant.

Gladstone Photographed.

AND THE PROCEEDINGS IN COURT THAT GREW OUT OF IT.

An action was heard at the Bolton County Court recently, in which Mr. Jas. Chevalier, law stationer, sued Mr. William Curnick, photographer, Bolton and Manchester, for the sum of £8 8s. for assisting in photographing Mr. W. E. Gladstone, M. P., in the act of tree-felling, and for other services On the 4th of August last the members of the Bolton Literal Association had a fête at Hawarden Castle. Plaintiff and defendant were among the representatives, who in the course of the day had the rare treat of witnessing Mr. Gladstone and his son, Mr. W. H. Gladstone, M. P., in the act of tree-felling in the park. On their way back to the station plaintiff suggested to defendant that with a little influence Mr. Gladstone might be induced to stand for his photograph in the character of "the wood-cutter" at the foot of the tree he had commenced to hew down. Plaintiff and defendant accordingly returned to the park, and after a little persuasion obtained permission to photograph the tree only on the Monday following. While making the arrangements plaintiff suggested to defendant that a letter should be written to Mrs. Gladstone, soliciting her to use her influence with the Right Honorable gentleman endeavor to induce him to sit for his photograph. This letter was dispatched, and on the Monday plaintiff and defendant went Hawarden Castle. On the way defendant said that if he were successful in photographing the Right Honorable gentleman, and it turned out to be a profitable speculation, he would reward him (the plaintiff) handsomely. Mr. Gladstone consented to be photographed along with his son, in his dress as a wood-cutter, with axe in hand, and defendant secured half a dozen negatives; subsequently he photographed the servants at the castle and the inmates of Mrs. Gladstone's Orphan Home, plaintiff assisting in the operation. The London Stereoscopic Company offered defendant £100 for the negatives without any further claim upon them, but this he declined. Eventually the defendant concluded an arrangement with another firm for the sale of a half share for £500, reserving certain rights, &c; defendant sent for plaintiff to London, but before his arrival everything had been concluded. His Honor held that there had been no contract on the part of the defendant, though there might have been the promise of a present, and gave a verdict for the defendant with costs.—London Standard.

Humors of House-Renting.

She was very pretty and quite young—nineteen or thereabouts—and when she tripped into the real estate office, and with a smile and blush began making inquiries regarding a little six room cottage out on Olive street, the real estate agent looked over his spectacles at her and thought he had never seen such a handsome woman for years. Question and answer followed each other in rapid succession, and at their conclusion the lady seemed as delighted with the house as the agent was with his prospective tenant. Then the lady's hand dived into the mysterious folds of her polonaise and drew forth a dainty little purse, from which she began to count forth crisp notes with which to pay her first month's rent of her new house. At the sight of money the agent's presence of mind returned to him, and remembering the rule of the office, which applies to cases where unprotected females apply to rent residences, he began questioning his fair customer:

"Ah, yes, madam; that is to say, Miss; ah, you intend the house?. Your father?"

"Why, no!"

"Your mother, then?"

"Why, no. What difference does it make?"

"O, nothing, nothing; but then we always like to know who is going to occupy the premises we rent."

"Well, I'm going to live there myself."

"Alone?"

"Certainly not."

"Did your parents, I suppose?"

"N-o-o-o," (with a faint blush).

"Who with, then?"

"With a gentleman." (A profusion of blushes).

"A gentleman! A relation I suppose."

"No sir-ee's such a relation, but—"

"Madam, I must decline to rent the premises. No madam, it's no use, I really—"

"But the gentleman I am going to marry," (cheeks carmine and eyes full of gentle fire).

And so it was that the real estate agent went and strayed in the back office just long enough to call himself a qualified old fool eight or nine times, after which he frisked back to his customer and promised newly papered walls, freshly whitened ceilings, hot and cold water on each floor, bronze gas fixtures throughout, grates in the fire-places and everything else she might want in the house, and handed her the receipt for the first month's rent with a bow and a smile that if the grandmother of his grandchildren had happened round just then, would have cost him a heap of domestic trouble.

APPLETON'S

American Cyclopædia.

NEW REVISED EDITION.

Entirely Rewritten by the Ablest Writers on Every Subject.

Printed from New Type, and illustrated with several thousand Engravings

—:O:—

The work originally published under the title of the New American Cyclopædia was completed in 1863, since which time the whole circumnavigation which has attained in Europe, the United States, and the signal developments which have taken place in every branch of science, literature, and art, have induced the editors and publishers to submit it to an exact and thorough revision, and issue a new edition entitled

The American Cyclopædia.

Within the last ten years the progress of discovery in every department of knowledge has made a new work of reference an imperative want.

The movement of political affairs has kept pace with the progress of science, and has found practical application to the industrial and useful arts and convenience and refinement of social life. Great wars and consequent revolutions have occurred, involving national changes of peculiar moment. The civil war of our own country, which was at its height when the last volume of the old work appeared has happily been ended, and the new course of commercial and industrial activity has been commenced. Large accessions to our have been made to the indefatigable explorers of Africa.

The great political revolutions of the last decade, with the natural result of the impetus time, who have by right, not a public view in shifting of men and things, which come in every one's mouth, and of whose lives every one is curious to know the particulars. Great battles have been fought and important sieges maintained, of which the details are only preserved only in the newspapers or in transient publications of the day, but which ought now to take their place in Permanent and Authentic History.

In preparing the present edition for the press it has accordingly been the aim of the editors to bring down the information to the latest possible date, and to furnish an accurate account of the most recent discoveries in science, of every fresh production in literature, and of the newest inventions in the practical arts, as well as to give a succinct and original record of the progress of Political and Historical Events.

The work was begun after long and careful preliminary labor, and was in an almost complete state for publication up to a successful termination.

None of the original stereotype plates have been used, but every page has been

Printed on New Type, forming in fact, a new Cyclopædia, with the same plan and compass as its predecessor, but with a far greater pecuniary expenditure, and with such improvements in its composition as have been suggested by longer experience and enlarged knowledge

The Illustrations,

which are introduced for the first time in the present edition, have been added not for the sake of pictorial effect, but to give lucidity and force to the explanations in the text They embrace all branches of science, and of natural history, and depict the most famous and remarkable features of the scenery, architecture, and art, as well as the various processes of mechanic and manufacturers Although intended for instruction rather than embellishment, no pains have been spared to insure their Artistic Excellence.

The cost of their execution is enormous, and it is believed they will find a welcome reception as an admirable feature of the Cyclopædia, and worthy of its high character.

The American Cyclopædia is Now Complete, in sixteen large octavo volumes, each volume containing over 800 pages, fully illustrated with several thousand Wood Engravings, and with numerous Colored Lithographic Maps, the whole costing the publisher a sum exceeding

Five Hundred Thousand Dollars,

exclusive of paper, printing, and binding.

Prices and Style of Binding.

The Best Cyclopædia ever Published,

one that will supersede all others, is now offered to the public at a very moderate price less than one cent a page!

Just think!

A Saving of Ten Cents per Day,

the price of a cigar, or many other expenditures for luxuries or frivolities of a like amount, would pay for a complete set of the Cyclopædia by a subscription subscription. Thus there will be something substantial saved, and a storehouse of knowledge, indeed

A Universal Library in Itself.

Specimen pages of the American Cyclopædia, showing type, illustrations, etc., will be sent gratis on application

Persons wishing to subscribe, can receive the whole set at one time, or one or more volumes at a time, the delivery being made at their option, without any inconvenience, by forwarding their address to
