The people in parts of this county have been much agitated during the past week on the steam boat fare question. Our advice to them is to wait and keep cool. It is a matter that will ultimately adjust itself to the best interests of all concerned. Our people are doubtless willing to pay a reasonable fare, and no more, and it is bound to come to that, sooner or later. While the merchants have been injured by the late very low rate of fare, farmers think they have been benefitted; but they can no more expect steamboats permanently to run passengers to Baltimore at 25 or 50 cents ahead, and lose money, than farmers can afford to raise corn at 10 cents a bushel and lose money. The advance in the price of fare has been simply a question of time, and it is to the interest of the public that the permanent rates should be speedily fixed and declared. The merchants have to pay a heavy license to the State for the right to do business, and are also taxed heavily on their stocks for county expenses, and it is very natural that they should feel resistive at the ruin of their trade by the steam-boat war that has prevailed here for more than a year past. It is apparent that the question has two sides to it, requiring people to consider it temperately and without passion. To some it may be a matter of life and death in business; to others only a loss or gain of a few dollars. If all will obey the Scriptural injunction, and "do unto others as they would have them do unto them," the excitement will speedily be allayed and the business of all will again flow on without a ripple, as it did before the war commenced.

Assistant Engineer, Mr. Francis Welch, of the Baltimore Fire Department, so severely sprained his back at a recent fire that he was unable to get up after sitting down. A few applications of Keller's Roman Liniment cured him.

MR. COLTON'S VIEWS.

What a Veteran Politician Thinks of the Present Situation—The State Ticket already Made—The Appeals Clerkship the Only Point of Contest—The Senatorship Question—A Hard Road to Travel for Mr. Whyte.

One of the shrewdest observers in the State, as well as one of the most influential Democratic politicians, is Mr. George Colton, editor and proprietor of the Maryland Republican. While he can wield a caustic pen, and can make any contest in which he engages hot for those who oppose him, he is at the same time remarkably urbane, and whatever may be the excitements or anxieties of a political fight, a smile that is childlike and bland always irradiates his countenance. Moving constantly among the counties and knowing everybody, his opportunities of noting the drift of political sentiment cannot be equalled. A reporter of the Baltimore American meeting him, said:

THE STATE TICKET.

"Well, is everything fixed up on the political slate, Mr. Colton?"

"The people, sir, who are the ones who make slates in a free community like ours, have fixed upon Mr. Hamilton for Governor."

"They do say, however, that Mr. Gorman has had a good deal to do with this choice of the people. Was there any bargain there?"

"Mr. Gorman is a friend of Mr. Hamilton. They drifted apart when Mr. Gorman gave his support to Whyte, but there was never any breach, and it is natural that they should come together again now that a new stage of party politics has been entered upon. Mr. Gorman sees that the popular sentiment is for Hamilton; that his nomination will heal up the party feuds, so he simply refused to enter into any of the combinations proposed against Hamilton. It is natural that their relations should become cordial again, but it is not the result of any bargain, as you style it."

"How about the attorney generalship?"

"The fact that Mr. Gwinn has been a thoroughly capable and efficient officer is good ground for his renomination. I have it from the best possible authority on such a subject, that Mr. Gwinn is the best attorney general the State has ever had. With the governorship going to Western Maryland, the treasurership to southern Maryland, the comptrollership to the Eastern Shore, it is clear that the city must have the attorney generalship, and the demand here for Gwinn's renomination is practically unanimous."

"Then, you think both Mr. Compton and Mr. Keating will be renominated?"

"Yes, Keating is a lucky man. He got the nomination last time without opposition, and he will get it this time the same way. The treasurer is elected by the legislature, but I can hear of no opposition to Compton."

"How about the Court of Appeals clerkship?"

"That is the one question in regard to the State ticket that may be regarded as open. The present incumbent is up for renomination. E. B. Prettyman and Spencer Jones, of Montgomery, are also spoken of in the same connection, and Harford county may present a candidate."

WHYTE AND GORMAN.

"How about the relations between Mr. Whyte and Mr. Gorman?"

At this question of the interviewer, Mr. Colton smiled one of his most innocent smiles, his face beamed with benevolence, and there was an increase in the buttery softness in his tones.

"Well," said he, with a sly glance, "they are different from what they were, but the rumors of a breach or falling out are altogether untrue."

"Will Whyte make the senatorship again?"

"Well," you know I am a friend of Mr. Whyte's, and admire him exceedingly, but I cannot but help admitting that the situation has changed greatly from what it was six years ago. There are difficulties in the way."

"Will he have any opposition?"

"Well," there are no lack of candidates. Robert McLane, S. Teackle Wallis, Judge Wm. M. Merrick, Henry Archer and Governor Carroll—all have warm friends whose influence will have its effect upon the legislature. If there should be a dead lock between Whyte and some other candidate, Governor Carroll might be brought forward as a compromise man. Mr. McLane has also a support that is enthusiastic in its attachment, and it is in the counties as well as in the city. His recent career in the State Senate made him many friends. The ease with which he meets every emergency, his tact, suavity, nerve and ready oratorical ability commanded the admiration of all who met him, and these qualities mark him out for brilliant distinction in national politics."

"Is not Mr. Gorman a candidate?"

"I am pretty intimate with Mr. Gorman, but he has never said so to me, nor indicated any desire to fill the position. His prominence as a public man, and his fitness for such a position, have, doubtless, cause the public to assign to him the position of a candidate."

"Mr. Whyte will get the twenty-one votes of Baltimore city, will he not?"

"Certainly not; I do not think it would be safe for him to calculate upon more than fourteen or fifteen. If there is a contest it is never safe to count Baltimore city solid, and certainly not at the present time. If Mr. Whyte consents that first-class men shall go on the city ticket, they will be men of independent minds, who will have their own preferences; if he should make up a ticket like that of 1874, he will not be able to hold them if it looks like a losing fight."

THE SITUATION IN THE COUNTIES.

"How about the counties?"

"Well, times have arisen that have not Joseph (Mr. Colton is fond of Scriptural references in his talk). Men are come to the front who do not know Whyte. They do know Gorman, and admire tact, ability and executive ... Whyte's administration as Governor unfortunately not so popular in the counties as it might have been, and his recent record in the Senate, that some of the counties do not ... A ... taste for the old constitutional discussions that used to attract so much attention before the war. The young men want to turn their backs on the lawyers and their hair-splitting and take hold of material things. This mental attitude of the times works strongly in Gorman's favor, for they all know that he has a thorough understanding of all the business interests of the State, and that he has accomplished a great deal for the material benefit of the State. There is one thing certain, and that is that, do what Mr. Whyte will, he must get about thirty votes from the counties in order to be elected."

"Won't the matter be settled up at the primaries like it was in 1873? You recollect that it was made a point against Mr. Kerr's candidacy for the Senate that he would not declare himself for Mr. Whyte, and he was beaten on that issue?"

BULLDOZING IMPOSSIBLE.

"Nothing of that sort is possible now. I will you, sir (making his finger to give emphasis to the point), that the senator to be elected will not choose the legislature, but the legislature will choose the senator. Mr. Whyte has some foolish friends, who are running about doing harm by saying that this, that and the other will be done unless men declare themselves for him, but it won't do. Men are in a position to declare their preferences now, and they intend to go to the legislature free agents. Mr. Whyte may be elected by the free and spontaneous choice of the legislature, but it would be much easier for him to secure his election if he had with him some men who were formerly with him, but who are now against him."

"Who are those men?"

"I have my idea, but it is simply a conjecture, and I would not be justified in expressing an opinion."

"Will Mr. Hamilton make the governorship a stepping stone to the Senate, as did Mr. Whyte?"

"I don't believe that Mr. Hamilton will be a candidate during his term. It is not, however, likely that Mr. Hamilton, with his ability, fortune and capacity for distinguished public service, would limit his ambition to a quiet four years' residence at Annapolis, or that the people would desire him to do so."

"Well, then, who will be elected senator?"

"Mr. Colton (smiling and moving off)—"I don't know."

Reporter (following him up)—"Well, then, has there been a split in the ring?"

"Mr. Colton (with dignity)—"Well, young man, if by the term ring you mean the representative men of the party who give intelligent direction to party movements, they are unanimous for Hamilton, and about this senatorial question, each is now in a position to express his own preferences. There is no ring business there now."

A British Disease.

The most marked peculiarity that will impress the American traveler when he walks the streets of London for the first time, is the great number of excessively fat people whom he everywhere meets. He at first supposes these persons to belong to the nobility, on the same principle that he would pronounce them aldermen or bankers if seen in Boston or New York. In brief, he labors under the popular though mistaken impression, that obesity is invariably the combined result of laziness and high living; while in reality it is a constitutional disease. Until very recently there was no known remedy for this uncomfortable disease, and its victims were obliged to submit to the vexation and not infrequent mortification that it occasions. Allan's Anti-Fat is the only remedy for this disease, and removes the abnormal condition by purely natural means. Ask your druggist for it.

OXFORD, March 17th, 1879.

To the Breeders of Trotting Horses in Talbot County:

Permit the undersigned to call attention to the fact that

Gen. Knox, Jr.

Will make the present season at Easton, Hambleton Park and at the residence of the undersigned in Oxford Neck, commencing Monday, March 17th, at Easton, Monday, March 24th, at Hambleton Park, Monday, March 31st, in the Neck.

Will remain a week at each place; and, returning Monday, April 7th, at Easton, will repeat the circuit through the entire season.

GENERAL KNOX, JR.,

Is a beautiful bright bay—about 15 hands high—well made and heavy for his height. Is elegantly formed, and of grand style at rest or in motion. Was foaled May 19th, 1875, at "Fashion Stud Farm," Trenton, New Jersey, the home of Jay Gould, General Knox, Socrates, General Washington, Gold Smith Maid, Lady Thorn, Lucy, and other celebrated trotting stallions and blood mares. He was bred by the late George Page West of the city of Baltimore, who kept his mares at that farm and bred them there. He was sired by General Knox, the most celebrated trotting stallion now living. Volunteer (accepted.

In his month's for June, 1877, Mr. Wallace says:

"General Knox is of the State of Maine full of horses of grand and bold trotting gait. He is a horse that transmits his trotting action with remarkable uniformity. He is the horse through which breeders of trotting stock can secure more of the blood of Imported Messenger than through any other living animal. If a mathematical calculation of proportions were necessary to determine the comparative greatness of trotting stallions, the standard being one hundred parts of the blood of Imported Messenger, General Knox is 82½ per cent., a better stock horse than Rysdyk's Hambletonian.

"If we examine the performances of his offspring in Maine, we will find, as his get, that have excelled on the track, the following, viz:

	Record.		Record.
Lady Maud,	2 18¾	John A. Heals	2 27½
Camors,	2 19½	Shadow,	2 28
Commonwealth,	2 22	Iron Age,	2 28½
Peaceful,	2 26	Lothair,	2 29½
Nellie Walton,	2 26½	Harry Spanker,	2 30
Charley B.,	2 27

In Lady and Camors and Adelaide, he has two daughters and a granddaughter that have been 2.20; and in Lady Maud a daughter that placed three heats in a single race below those figures. More than this cannot be said of any stallion that ever lived, and none but General Knox, Rysdyk's Hambletonian and Volunteer ever sired so many as two colts with records under 2.20

In the face of this list of brilliant stars, as his brothers and his sisters, who dares cite the record for a more hopeful prospect and promise of future greatness, than General Knox, Jr.

General Knox, Jr., has for his dam the thoroughbred mare "Hattie O'Neil," sired by Bay Dick, and he by the immortal Lexington. Hattie's dam was by Imported Sovereign. Hattie was injured by a fall on the ice, in her fourth year, which incapacitated her for track service.

Thus it appears that whilst the General received from his sire more trotting blood than he could have obtained from the loins of any other living horse, he brought with him from the womb of his dam, all the blood for speed at the running gait for which his illustrious grand-sires Lexington and Imported Sovereign were so justly celebrated. In the old adage "that blood will tell" be still true, then the owner of this star of promise hazards nothing in saying the breeders of Talbot have, in his proffered services, an opportunity for the production of trotting stock never before extended to them.

If the sons of Frank Pierce (Haddaway's) standing for mares in this county, who have but one of their kin, with a record under 2.30 (Phil Dougherty, record 2.27) are regarded as good stock horses, how much more is this son of General Knox, with a brotherhood of thirteen, trotting away down below those magic figures, entitled to the preference and esteem of breeders, who believe trotting blood is essential to the production of trotting horses.

Owing to the General's youth, his acquaintance will be limited to thirty select mares, and none but mares of trotting action will be permitted to receive his attentions

Whilst the sire of General Knox, Jr., stands at $150 for the season, and his brothers, General Washington, Gilbreth Knox, Jules Jergerson, Phil. Sheridan and Wbalebone Knox stand at $100, General Knox, Jr., will insure for $30, or make the season for $20.
