Agricultural.

Destroying Insects.

Professor Lazenby, of Ithaca, reported to the Rochester horticultural meeting a number of his experiments in destroying garden insects. The striped cucumber beetles give the most trouble, and appear in swarms on melons, cucumbers and squashes. The best remedy is light sprinkling of fine soot and ashes, collected from boiler flues. Air-slaked lime is nearly as good. For the cabbage destroyer he has applied carbolic acid, copperas water, ammonia, cayenne pepper, tobacco, [illegible] water, [illegible] better than any of them. The soap is put in a barrel of water at the rate of 4 pounds to a barrel. It is dissolved in a few days and is then ready for application with a watering-pot. The last of the three necessary applications should be at least two weeks before the cabbages are harvested. The longer the solution stands the worse is its odor, and the more effective its results.

Le Cultivateur, a French journal, says that if chloride of lime be spread on the soil or near plants, insects and vermin will not be found near them, and adds: "By its means plants will easily be protected from insect plagues by simply brushing over their stems with a solution of it. It has often been noticed that a patch of land which has been treated in this way remains free of grubs, while the unprotected beds around are literally devastated. Fruit trees may be guarded from the attacks of grubs by attaching to their trunks pieces of tow smeared with a mixture of hog's lard, and ants and grubs already in possession will rapidly vacate their position. Butterflies again, will avoid [illegible] sprinkled over with lime water."

Blanching Celery.

The following easy method of blanching celery and securing a supply in the spring is recommended by the Country Gentleman:

"Keep the plants, when taken up, entirely away from earth, if intended for winter blanching. About the middle of November they are taken up on a dry day and placed in water tight troughs, or other vessels, in a quite dark cellar, the plants standing erect and closely together. Enough water is poured on the roots to cover them, and the supply is continued through winter as it evaporates. This constitutes the entire labor. The stalks are gradually and handsomely blanched in the darkness, and early new [illegible] spring, during the winter months, especially if the apartment is not very cold, and these new shoots are remarkable for their delicacy and perfect freedom from any particle of rust, appearing like polished ivory. A sufficiently warm apartment in the cellar, without windows, answers well for this purpose. Boxes, tubs, or any vessel which will hold a few inches of water, may be employed. The plants, as grown in the open ground, need not be earthed up at all, or they may be slightly earthed to bring them into a more compact form if desired. Probably the best way would be to adopt the course which is sometimes employed, of setting out the plants in summer on the level surface of deep rich soil, 8 or 10 inches or 1 foot apart each way, in order that their close growth may tend to give them a more upright form. They are merely kept clean by hoeing through the season."

Currant Worms.

Those who have experienced annoyance through the ravages of the currant worm may find it worth while to try the plan of a writer in the Fruit Recorder. He says: "To starting a currant patch I confine the bush not to exceed from one to three main stems, and give all the strength of the root to their support. As hinted above, sprouts will start from the roots each spring, but they must be rubbed off when about six inches long. All currant growers are aware that worms first make their appearance on the new growth and then spread over the bush. Consequently, no sprouts, no worms. This is just as plain as that two and two make four. I have followed this plan for the past two years to my satisfaction, and have barely seen the effect of worms on one or two bushes where my plan was not fully carried out. But such currants I never saw grow, the common red Dutch being nearly as large as the cherry currant and a better bearer. I had a few bushes that actually broke down from their load of fruit."

Copperas for Corn.

The Phrenological Journal gives the following result of an experiment with seed corn: "Four boxes of earth, alike in quantity and exposure to light and heat, were planted at the same time with corn from a single ear, procured recently of a physician of Paris. In one boxful corn was planted, in the second, seed previously soaked in clean warm water; in the third, seed had been soaked in a solution of lime water; in the fourth, seed soaked in chloride of lime and copperas water, equal parts. One week after, the dry corn had not germinated; the corn in the second box had just commenced to sprout; that in the third box was just showing the green blades, and that in the fourth box had grown nearly three inches high. Copperas water will prevent birds and worms from eating the seed, and one pound of dried copperas will soak enough for twenty acres."

Mr. Knox, the "Strawberry King" of Pittsburg, was very successful, and his plan was to set the plants eighteen inches apart each way, cut off all runners, and cultivate with a hoe, keeping the ground mulched after the first summer. From a single picking of the Jucunda he sent one hundred bushels to New York, and the same quantity to Philadelphia, which brought him fifty cents a quart at wholesale, besides retailing a large quantity at Pittsburg the same day. His soil was heavy clay, and very rich.

A correspondent of the N. E. Farmer, residing in Sharon, Mass., raised a flock of seventy-five thoroughbred brown Leghorn hens. He commenced November 1st to make a record of their laying, which resulted as follows: November, 1880, 915; December, 570; January, 1881, 593; February, 807; March, up to the 20th, 796—making a total of 3,680 eggs in 140 days.

C. E. Cooley, of Charlemont, Mass., has a cow eight years old that has borne eighteen calves. She had eight before she was six years old, sometimes four at a time twice and three at a time twice.

All land intended for spring sowing should have its surface worked early to keep down the weeds, the benefit to the soil in improved tilth, and to leave more time paying for labor.

Decayed grain of any kind is highly injurious to stock, the fine is paralyzing effect upon the animal fed with it, often causing death.

Salt is a benefit to land in its power to attract moisture, and in dry seasons a great advantage to crops in times of drought.

The gold coinage at the Philadelphia mint amounted to over $1,250,000 in March, 1881.

EARS FOR THE MILLION!

Poo-Chee's Balsam of Shark's Oil

Positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness Known.

This oil is extracted from a peculiar species of small shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as Curcharodon Rondeletii. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest about the year 1119. Its cures were so numerous and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address $1.31 per bottle.

Only Imported by HAYLOCK & CO.,
SOLE AGENTS FOR AMERICA, 7 Dey St., New York.

Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, in the writer's own positive style, both in every case and in every variety of deafness.

Anyone in any state of hearing, who is in one part and another of the country, it is probable that numbers are afflicted with deafness, and to such it may be said: "Write at once to Haylock & Co., 7 Dey Street, New York, enclosing $1, and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—Editor of New York Mercantile Review, Sept. 25, 1880.
