MANCHESTER

We were in the cemetery the other day and enjoyed seeing quite a lot of work done in many of the lots and others scheduled for the early attendance, but there is a block southeast of the old oak tree, excepting some lots in fine condition, the contrast is so great that it excites sympathy at once. Many good members who, in their days, were active and attentive to their christian duties now lie neglected with their last resting place overgrown with briers and weeds. Can't something be done? Is there no way to get an improvement started that year after year is growing worse? Isn't there some one that will say "take me?" If there be, call a meeting. Will not the Sunshine come to the meeting? It can well be placed in the charity column, in which, without any show, they do their charity work. If that block of God's-acre can be cleaned up and the tombstones straightened everybody will be glad. Decide at the meeting to hold a supper, festival, or something in which everybody can contribute and inform away friends who too will contribute. We believe a neat sum can be raised and put in the hands of some one who will superintend the work gratis. What have you to say? Communicate with the Sentinel, it will give space in such laudable work.

Misses Edna and Carrie LaMotte, Sadie C. Masenheimer and Mrs. James Wagaman were driven to Frederick by Mr. John B. Baker on Sunday last as visitors to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Breck Shaw. A little later these visitors were augmented by the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. H. T. J. LaMotte and Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Motter, of Baltimore. Mr. and Mrs John Shaw and family were the next to arrive at the home, in time to give a warm reception to Mr and Mrs. Wallis Witter and son, of Utica, New York. Mrs. Witter formerly was Miss Gerandine LaMotte, of California. The occasion was in honor of Robert Shaw, of Cleveland, Ohio, who was a delegate to the American Chemical Society that had convened in Washington, D. C., last week. The honored guest had informed his parents that he would include a visit home in his trip, after the association. A pleasant feature of the occasion was that each arrival was ignorant of the coming of the others. As a whole it was a most enjoyable meeting and reunion of parents, children, and friends.

At the annual election for officers in Immanuel Lutheran church on Sunday Messrs. W. D. Hanson and Milton Yingling were elected elders, and Messrs. Harry Fultz, Harvey Miller and Sterling Brown deacons.
