Agricultural.

Corn in Ninety Days.

There is scarcely any growth in the Middle and Northern States more wonderful than that of Indian corn. It does ordinarily have a fair start before the last of June or the first of July, but when the warm weather actually commences, it grows with remarkable rapidity, five, seven, and even ten feet in height within six weeks of the time of the commencing of the seed, which consumes three or four weeks. The corn grows with such rapidity when hot nights succeed hot days, that the crinkling of the leaves as they open may be heard in a quiet time. A correspondent of the Country Gentleman, writing from Illinois, gives the following account of a crop which was perfected in ninety days:

"Referring to my letter I presented June 17th, where I put down on the 28th of May had failed, I expressed confidence of a crop in spite of the late seeding and the extreme drought. Yesterday (Sept. 12th) it became necessary to cut the corn up and remove it, in order to afford pasturage for some cows, and I was shrprised at the maturity attained and the size of the ears, considering only ninety days had elapsed between seeding and harvest. The total rainfall since planting had not exceeded two inches. Though by no means ripe and dry, the ears are so mature that the corn might be cut up and put in shock without much shrinkage, and without serious damage to the fodder, if the weather continues dry. For comparison sake the plants grown in other parts of the field I observe, that the stalks are short and stout; the spaces between the joints are less than usual; the leaves are broad, numerous, and full from the bottom; the ears shoot comparatively near the ground, and the fodder is apparently as much relished by milch cows as if sweet corn. They eat it wholly up. In this experiment, in a dry season, unaided, hardwood ashes have proved to be valuable in increasing the foliage, and therefore the ears of corn, as in the wet season of 1875, when an experimental acre treated to wood ashes at the commencement of growth, yielded 65 bushels 12 qts. 30 lbs., while other acres which were furnished barn-yard manure ad libitum, and returned not above 55 bushels."

Sheep Husbandry.

We have [illegible] the statistical department of the Government showing that the imports of foreign wool into the United States for 1879 were 64,908,000 lbs., against 17,464,728 lbs. in 1878. The importations in 1879 was $8,284,708. To this must be added nearly or quite 100 per cent. in order to cover freight, ocean insurance, and other items to importers, making a total of $16,568,416 paid in a single year by American manufacturers for foreign wools. This sum should have gone into the pockets of American farmers, and it is their own fault that it does not do so. It is absurd to suppose that a country like ours, possessing every variety of climate and soil is unable to produce every grade of wool required by our manufacturers. As a sample of what might be done in the way of wool growing, we will cite the progress made in California. In 1854 the total product of that State was only 175,000 pounds, and in 1879 there was marketed 46,903,660 lbs. This enormous increase is due to the fact that the farmers of California had the good sense to diversify their industries—grain, wool, honey, and fruit each, receiving their due proportion of attention, whereas, the farmers of the Atlantic slope, confine their attention to a few staples, and think all others beneath their attention. In this connection it may be proper to state that over 66 per cent. of the wool imported last year, came from England, a country whose farmers stand a poor show as to competing with those of the United States.

Milk Affected by the Condition of

The comfort of the cow has much to do with the quality of her milk. In hot weather, the annoyance produced by flies, and excitement caused by fighting them, make the night's milk still poorer than it otherwise would be. Chemical analysis has shown a great falling off of fat of the milk in the same cow when chased by a dog. Any unusual excitement of the cow affects the fat in her milk. Extremes of heat and cold also affect the milk. In a case where cows went into a stream in hot weather, and stood several hours in the water, above the knee, there was a falling off of the butter product from the same quantity of milk. This is accounted for by the extra food required to keep up the animal heat in consequence of the heat being carried off by the water. When we consider the fact that milk is secreted from the blood, we can readily see the effect that must be produced by excitement on the nervous system of the cow. In a case occurring in the city of Albany, N. Y., where a nervous cow was milked by a passionate man, who whipped and otherwise ill-treated her at milking, the milk was given to a child who had been healthy, but, after using this milk, became ill and suffered from intestinal irritation, followed by a fever which seemed to affect the brain and nervous system. This illness was traced directly to the milk of this ill-treated cow.—Live Stock Journal.

Hints for the Poultry Yard.

There is nothing new in the following suggestions of the New York Tribune in reference to poultry, but they are as practical now as ever:

"First, hens, to do well, must have a warm, dry place, with plenty of sunshine. We always keep a box of ashes for them to wallow in, which should be kept perfectly dry. Every few weeks, and sometimes oftener, the hennery is thoroughly dusted with dry ashes, occasionally adding a [illegible] while we wet the roosts with kerosene. A spring-bottom [illegible] is just the thing for the purpose. Attending to these rules [illegible] need not have lice, which is an important item in keeping poultry. Our chief object is eggs, for which there is generally a ready market and good price. And to lay well, hens must have plenty to eat, and of the right kind. We generally feed corn, and in the winter let them shell it for themselves, after giving each ear a blow or two with the hammer or something of that kind to start the kernels. This gives them exercise and keeps them from eating too much. One would think they would not get enough to eat in this way; but if kept before them in a clean, dry place, they will keep fat. Give them each morning what they will pick clean in the day."

A little house of lilies of the valley, sent from New Orleans by mail, has been received in fresh condition in Providence, Rhode Island. They came inclosed in a pocket-book, one of which had been slightly torn, leaving a tiny shell.

THE GOLDEN SHEAF. A Fertilizer specially adapted to the Soil of the Eastern Shore of Maryland. $20 PER TON. Sold at a very small profit for cash of production and clear of Rents, Impositions. THE COMPOSITION NO SECRET. Made of Pure Bone and Potash. FOR SALE BY THE OXFORD GUANO CO., Oxford, Md. W. H. SETH, Secretary.

The attention of Farmers who desire to secure a good fertilizer at a reasonable price, is respectfully called to the above named brand. The object of the manufacturers has been to originate a compound of plant foods directly adapted to the soil of the Eastern Shore of Maryland, and to offer the price therefor at the lowest possible figures; cutting off all agents fees of every kind, and adding to the actual cost only a very small profit. We think this fertilizer has as much intrinsic value as most of the high priced manures, and feel confident that farmers who shall fairly prove to use it will say, that in its effects upon the soil, it will equal them. The analysis, as made by Prof. G. A. Liebig, shows it to contain:—

Ammonia, from	75 to 1.25	per cent.
Phosphoric Lime, from	5.00 to 7.00	"
Lime	33.10	"
Carbonic Acid	26.07	"

The materials which are essential to plant growth, are obtained from oyster shells ground to powder, instead of being burnt. This combination not only disperses with the necessity for dirt or sand to hold the chemicals, but is a most valuable assistant to their action. We are also manufacturing ground lime, which we propose to put upon the market at a low price. aug30-6m
