SOME STRONG VIRGINIA MOONSHINE

Two Virginia moonshiners were bragging about the quality of their brew, when one said:

"I make mine so strong that the man who drinks it can smell the hayseed in the hair of the man who plowed the corn."

"That's nothing," said the other; "I once spilled a little of mine on a spot where my wife had planted some modest violets and darn me if they didn't come up tiger lillies."

Anyway when the people lose their money in foolish investments, they don't have to worry about how they are going to spend it.

Knitted Material for Sports Wear

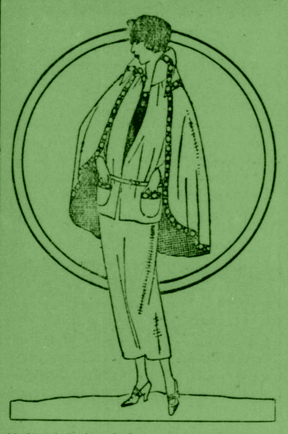

Outfit Is Better Suited to Country—Sweater Still Strong Favorite.

When one comes to speak of knitted clothes one notes first that, whether in the field of strictly sports models or otherwise, they have come to be accepted as indispensable. Whether the fact that clothes of knitted material disqualifies them for use in town or not is a question frequently brought up. Obviously, notes a fashion correspondent in the New York Herald, they are better suited to the country, but there are certain types which do very well for the city as well.

Although the sweater has gone through a decided change in the last six months, it probably is still the most important of the articles in knitted wools. If one does not recognize the sweater as such at first glance it is not to be wondered at. Matched to a skirt of fine plaited crepe and itself changed in line, it is quite the smartest thing that clothes for the country have to offer.

As to the silk sweater, it appears in glorified guise, heavily embroidered and with a deep fringed scarf to match. As most costumes for the country are combinations of white and color, the sweater is the thing that comes in for the color note.

In a straight slipover sweater the color is dark blue embroidered with a border and a few large disks of white, yellow and green, and the scarf is attached to the back at the wide bateau neck line. This scarf is very wide and hanging over the shoulders at the front, reaches well below the bottom of the sweater. The skirt, a box plaited model, has a binding of yellow around the bottom, a fashion in which many skirts, particularly sports models, are finished. A white sweater suit of similar design has a separate scarf and the embroidery is done in a very vivid color scheme, blues and reds predominating.

Then there is the sweater which is really a short coat with the edges of the fronts and the collar bordered heavily in an embroidered design, and a coat sweater with the collar faced in plain material, edges bound in the same manner.

A checked design in the weave as well as in the color is used for a suit with slipover coat, slashed at the throat and bound in white. A wide collar and large cuffs are also in white. A scarf of the same material makes this a very practical suit for the street or country.

Checked or Striped Hosiery for Spring

The plaids, block checks, square and diamond shape—and ribbed effects seen in the woolen stockings that have been so fashionable are being duplicated in the lighter weight wool and silk stockings for spring.

Colored socks are the rage, the sand color, tan, flesh, beige, gray and brown being the most popular. The most conspicuous styles are checked or striped in darker tones or contrasting colors, and the dropstitch rib is the newest weave.

The orchid, flesh and seashell, two-tone and others of the more delicate shades in chiffon silk stockings are very smart for dress occasions and will be much in demand later in the season with lightweight frocks.

Shoulder Cape to Match New With Sports Apparel

If one is addicted to the use of capes, there is one of the very newest models in sports clothes which comes with a shoulder cape to match. Both dress and cape are in soft white wool, knitted in broad bands, to give the effect of plaits. The dress, a plain chemise model, is fastened at one side with a five-button slash and has two slashed hip pockets bound with the material. Quite as simple in design is the cape, which hangs well below the low waistline and has a high standing collar fastening with one button.

Mends Lace Curtains

To mend fine lace curtains starch a piece of mesh as near like the curtains as possible. Cut the starched patch one inch larger each way than the place to be mended and with a warm iron press it over the hole. If done carefully it will be difficult to detect the hole.

ORCHARD GLEANINGS

SAN JOSE SCALE IS HARD TO ERADICATE

The San Jose scale shows evidence of a very interesting development. In the Northwest, at least, accumulating evidence seems to point to the fact that this insect is capable of developing strains or races that are immune to the effects of lime-sulphur, says the Rural New Yorker. It is difficult to prove this tendency, but it is evident that where the scale was once satisfactorily controlled by spraying with lime-sulphur it is not now being held in check with this material even when it is applied at the same strength as formerly, and with just as much care and thoroughness as in former years. In fact we have heard during the last few years much complaint from growers in Arkansas, Illinois, and from a few in New York, that lime-sulphur does not kill the scale as it used to do. Can it be that this notorious pest is really becoming resistant to the effects of lime-sulphur, so that we shall have to look for a new material with which to fight it? Only prolonged observations and experiments during the coming years can answer this question. Growers in Arkansas and Illinois have already begun to use oil sprays in place of lime-sulphur, and apparently with much better success in controlling the scale. In New York, however, the problem of the scale does not seem quite so serious as it does in the Mississippi valley; and this agrees with the characteristics of this insect, for it is a notable fact that the San Jose scale varies in different regions in the virulence of its injuries and in its resistance to spray mixtures. For example, Melander of Washington points out that the scale is much more difficult to control in the orchards about Clarkston in the Snake river valley than in those in the region of Wenatchee in the Columbia river valley.

Bordeaux Mixture May Be Reduced in Strength

Bordeaux mixture may be greatly reduced in strength and cost without lessening its efficiency as a fungicide by reducing the copper sulphate content. This has been proved in actual practice.

In preparing bordeaux a recommended rule is to use three pounds of good hydrated lime for each pound of copper sulphate. A 2-6-50 bordeaux spray in the pink of the fruit bud of the apple, sprays of half that strength, or 1-3-50 bordeaux, just after the petals fall and again in two and ten weeks thereafter, have given as good results in scab control as the so-called standard 3-9-50 mixture, and with far less injury to fruit and foliage. Even weaker mixtures than the 1-3-50 gave satisfactory control of apple scab and apple blotch.

Success in the control of fungous disease depends more largely on timeliness and thoroughness in spraying than upon the strength of the materials used.

Develop Wound Dressing Effective for All Trees

Since the spring of 1919, tests have been going on at Ohio experiment station to develop a wound dressing which is effective and free from the disadvantages of those previously used. Water-glass seems to meet the requirements. All the experiments with this new dressing have been highly successful.

This material is the substance largely used for preserving eggs. A solution containing three parts of the commercial water-glass and one part of water has given practically as good results in the experiments as the full strength solution, and is the strength recommended. It is easily applied with a paint-brush and appears to be entirely harmless to the tree.

Owing to its solubility, the water-glass readily unites with the sap of the tree and is thus able to penetrate slightly into the pores of the fresh surface of the wood.

Horticultural Facts

It is not necessary to use dynamite in digging holes to set trees in most soils. Never dynamite when soil is wet.

Apples for every day in the year may be had from a couple dozen trees, most of which should be winter varieties.

Careful spraying with lime sulphur is the best method of dealing with the San Jose scale. This spray also destroys the eggs of plant lice and is valuable as a fungicide.

Raising the right varieties is one secret of success of the apple grower.

Strawberry plants are easy to start. Most folks who have trouble can usually trace it to late spring planting or to delay in setting out in the field, when plants have to be shipped.

A matter that should not be overlooked is the wire labels that are put on at the nursery. The tree grows rapidly in diameter and the wire soon constricts the flow of sap and causes serious injury.

POLITICAL CARD

To The Republican Voters of Carroll County:

When the Eighteenth Amendment was passed it closed the doors of every liquor saloon in this country. Its repeal would open them again, and conditions would be a thousand-fold worse than ever before. Mr. E. Ridgley Simpson is a member of the Executive Committee of the Association that wants the Amendment repealed. I am bitterly opposed to such action. If a Republican, go to the primary on Monday, May 5, and place your X mark opposite my name as follows:

CHAS. W. KING

So far as heard from the scissors sharpeners have not objected to the hair bobbing custom.

Spite of the determination of the women folks to emulate the men, not many of them have yet succeeded in growing whiskers.
