Agricultural.

A Cow with Garget.

"I have a young Alderney cow that lost one of her teats a year since, and is now in the way to lose another. The teat now affected yields a very small quantity of watery fluid night and morning, and the udder, about it is very hard and caked, the remaining portion appearing to be in its usual normal condition. The cow gives very rich milk, and while she appears to be lively and healthy otherwise, her udder is evidently diseased. Can you tell me what is the matter and give me a remedy?"

Your cow is suffering from garget, and the destruction of the other teat last year proceeded from the same cause. The causes of this disease are various. Sometimes it proceeds from a blow on the udder, or from bruises received in getting [illegible] from exposure to cold showers, or any treatment which results in general debility. Cows in full milk, and those giving that which is very rich, are more subject to garget than what are termed poor milkers. Draw the milk three times a day and rub the udder well each time; also wash it frequently in warm vinegar or camphor. Give the cow salts, two tablespoonfuls daily in a warm bran mash for three or four days in succession, following this up with small doses of aconite or nitre. We have generally found that frequent bathing of the udder, and thorough manipulation of the affected part, and light doses of salts in the bran mashes would effect a cure except in very severe cases. Removing the calf from the cow [illegible] frequently followed by garget.—New York Sun.

Importation of Potatoes.

The extensive drought of the past season seriously damaged the Irish potato crop of this country, consequently prices have been exceptionally high and dealers have sought for supplies in different localities. Nova Scotia furnished large quantities, and [illegible] potatoes have been imported largely from Scotland and Ireland. The variety of these tubers [illegible] not up to the standard of our varieties, as Early Rose, Snowflake or Burbank. In conversation with one of the principal importers, it was learned that either Scotch or Irish could be brought over after paying a duty of fifteen cents per bushel, with freight and expenses, for seventy-five to ninety-five cents per bushel, [illegible] dealer. [illegible] son had [illegible] adhere to the tubers, so they do not have the smooth appearance desired in the New York market. The varieties are similar to our Peachblow in size and shape, but the flesh is more yellow and the flavor more mild.

The potatoes are shipped from this city in car loads to the manufacturing towns of the East and Pennsylvania, and even as far South as Charleston and Savannah. This is the first season in which an import trade has been done to any extent in vegetables, and shows how facilities for transportation have increased when heavy, bulky articles can be sent for three thousand miles and sold at a fair price. An importation of cabbages from Denmark has also been fairly successful.

Indian Corn in Hills or Drills.

A great [illegible] of farmers here, now recognize that planting corn in hills is a great mistake, and that when the crop is made in drills four feet apart, and the seed so planted that the stalks will be from nine to twelve inches apart, the yield will be from ten to fifteen bushels more per acre than when the land is cheek rowed and three or four stalds stand in bunches three and a-half or [illegible] with modifications caused by the size of the corn and the richness of the soil, is the true doctrine of corn culture as has also been demonstrated here in late years. It carries out the principles of the plant for successful ear production, which can be accomplished only by allowing space enough between the rows to prevent shading the stalks. This must always be the point in regulating ear growth; the larger and more spreading the corn or the hills in the row, the greater must be the distance between the rows, a point [illegible] or heeded. All kinds of corn, whether large or small, are usually put at the same distance, and most always too close; the exceptions are the smallest corn on poor soil, when from a lack of fertility the crop will prove a failure. Fertility is a principal factor, not only a necessity of growth, but as influencing space; a strong growth from its greater spread, requiring more room. Hence the richer the soil the farther the [illegible] —Country Gentleman.

Pruning Grape Vines.

The [illegible] pruning of grape vines consists in removing the small shoots which show by their size and lack of vigor that they will not make strong canes, such as supply the buds for the wood that is to produce the next year's crop. But in no case will the fruit be benefitted by pruning away a large portion of the vigorous new canes. If you think your vines are overloaded, clip out a portion of the bunches while they are small. Nor will removing the leaves later in the season, "to let in the sun" do anything but mischief, as grapes exposed to the burning rays of the sun are not hastened to maturity at all, and are much injured in quality. If one believes all about grapes that is published in the papers, from men who know but very little on this subject, he will be apt to destroy his vines in a few years. The general rule has been laid down by good writers to pinch off the ends of canes to within two leaves of the fruit. If this be done to every cane there would no wood left for the next season's fruit. You must leave some of the longest canes untouched for this purpose; then you may cut back the smaller [illegible] to within two leaves of the fruit. [illegible] think best, but I consider close summer pruning a good [illegible] to take a square or two of a man's [illegible] him." Prune [illegible]

Salt on Wheat.

While on some soils salt produces no apparent results, on others it is of marked benefit. Its utility can only be learned by experiment. Its often has an indirect action, in enabling the plant to take up silica and strengthen the straw. Its effect in preventing the growth of those minute fungi which cause rust and smut, is sometimes beneficial. After cold weather has put a stop to the growth of the plants, salt sown at the rate of five or six bushels to the acre, often increases the health of the plant [illegible] of the appearance of the grain.—American Agriculturist.

It has been estimated that in a prosperous season for cabbage, not less than 12,000,000 heads of this succulent vegetable find sale in Philadelphia markets, and at least $5,000,000 [illegible] into our trout.

A Fertilizer specially adapted to the Soil of the Eastern Shore of Maryland.

$20 PER TON.

Sold at a very small profit on cost of production and clear of Agents' commissions.

THE COMPOSITION NO SECRET.

Made [illegible] of DR. [illegible]

FOR SALE BY THE OXFORD GUANO CO., Oxford, Md. W. H. SETH, Secretary.

The attention of Farmers who desire to secure a good fertilizer at a reasonable price, is respectfully called to the above name brand.

The object of the manufacturers has been to originate a compound in which the chemistry adapted to the soil of the Eastern Shore of Maryland, and to fix the price thereof at the lowest possible figures; cutting off all agents fees of $5 and $6 per ton and adding to the actual cost only a very small profit. We think this fertilizer has as much humic acid as the most costly high price manures, and feel confident that farmers who may think proper to use it will say, that in its effects upon the soil, it will equal them.

The analysis, as made by Prof. G. A. Liebig, shows it to contain:—

Ammonia, from	.75 to 1.25	per cent.
Phosphoric Lime, from	5.00 to 7.00	"
Lime	33.10	"
Carbonic Acid	26.07	"

The lime and carbonic, which are essential to plant growth, are obtained from oyster shells ground to powder, instead of being burnt. This combination not only dispenses with the necessity for dirt or sand to hold the chemicals, but is a most valuable assistant to their action.

We are also manufacturing ground lime, which we propose to put upon the market at a low price. aug30-3m

A little more care in stacking and thrashing will insure so much better keeping as to enable farmers to spare at least half of their straw, the cash for which would nearly pay for their phosphates.
