Useful Garden Herbs.

In every vegetable garden there should be planted a bed of useful herbs which are so often needed in the kitchen, many and [illegible] during the year. Their culture is very simple, after the seeds are planted, the only labor needed being to keep out the weeds and thin out the plants so that they will grow stout and strong. The leaves of some herbs are used for flavoring and dressing of meats, and others for making herb teas, therefore they should be gathered before the plants flower. Unless it is desired to raise seeds from them it is better to cut off the flower stalks from them.

Balm is a perennial plant, and its leaves have an agreeable aromatic taste and a lemon like odor, and are useful for soups and dressings. They are also used for coughs and colds. Basil is much used for seasonings; its leaves, when dried and powdered, or chopped fine while fresh, having the flavor and odor of cloves. Caraway, a perennial, is valuable for its seeds, which are used in cakes and an oil is distilled from them for medicinal purposes. Coriander is an annual, cultivated chiefly for its seeds, which are used by druggists and distillers but its young leaves make a highly flavored salad, and are sometimes used as a seasoning for soups. Lavender is a shrubby plant, valuable for the pleasing perfume of its foliage, from which comes the distilled water that is so popular for the toilet.

Sweet marjoram is an annual; its leaves are very aromatic, and highly esteemed for flavoring soups, dressings and sausages. Sage is also much employed for these purposes. It also makes an excellent febrifuge. A tea made from its dried leaves is considered a specific for colds and coughs. As a hair restorative it is also in repute. A strong decoction of the leaves, with rusty nails added to it, to supply iron, will, it is said, prevent the hair from turning grey. Thyme is a species of marjoram, with much smaller leaves. It is used for flavoring. Tansy is useful in the sick room, and many women hold it in high esteem. Rue possesses very bitter properties, and is considered a specific for some complaints. Its leaves are gathered and steeped in alcohol while green, or else dried for winter use. Wormwood is also used in the same way as rue, and it is thought to be highly beneficial to dyspeptics. It is said to be used for making absinthe, a favorite stomachic employed by the French.—Country Gentleman.

Hints For Poor Sleepers.

Poor sleepers will find it advantageous often to raise the head of the bed a foot higher than the foot, and then sleep on a tolerably thick hair pillow, so as to bring the head a little higher than the shoulders. The object is to make the work of the heart in throwing blood to the brain harder, so it will not throw so much. A level bed, with the head almost as low as the feet, causes an easy flow of blood to the brain and prevents sleep. Persons who find themselves restless and unable to sleep at night would do well to place the head toward the north, as it is undoubtedly a great conductive to health. A hot mustard foot-bath, taken on or about bedtime, is beneficial in drawing the blood from the head and thus inducing sleep. Sponge the entire length of the spine with hot water for ten or fifteen minutes before retiring. This will often insure a good night's sleep. A hearty meal and a seat near a warm fire, after a long walk in the cold wind, will induce deep sleep in the majority of persons, no matter how lightly they ordinarily slumber. Active outdoor exercise and avoidance of excessive and long continued and mental exertion, are necessary in all cases of sleeplessness. When these means fail, such remedies as are known to diminish the amount of blood in the head should be resorted to—of course under the direction of a competent physician. Opium, chloral, etc., increase the quantity of blood in the head, and are highly injurious.

Road Making.

The Country Gentleman gives the following points on the subject of road making, which are worthy of consideration. Every county ought to have good roads and every county ought to know how to make them. The paper cited gives the following practical hints:

The kind of labor to be done on the highway depends much upon circumstances. If in a new country, the aim usually is to make the whole length of the road as passable as the allotted tax will permit. In older districts it is best to merely repair, and do the work so thoroughly, as to be a permanent improvement. It is better to do only a small part with each year, than to distribute time and expense over the whole length of the highway doing nothing thoroughly, and repeat this year after year. When all the road bed has been properly made, the main work thereafter is to keep the surface hard, smooth and of the right slope that water may be carried off rapidly after a rain. A large scraper, drawn by four horses passed over the road now and then as needed, will do much to make the country roads what they should be.

Salt as a Fertilizer.

The Massachusetts Agricultural Society is said to have arrived at the following conclusions in regard to the manurial value of salt: "That salt has the property of hasting the maturing of all grain crops; that wheat on salted land will ripen six to ten days earlier than on unsalted land, all other conditions being equal; that it increases the yield from twenty-five to fifty per cent.; that it stiffens the straw, and prevents rust and smut; that it destroys, if it does not improve, the vitality of the chinch bug; and that there is no danger of a man's pocket permitting him to put too much salt upon land, as two barrels per acre will injure no grain crop; the best time to sow salt is in the spring, and it ought to be the last thing done on either fall or spring plowing, as all after stirring of the land assists in its equal distribution through the soil. The best and easiest method of doing it in the absence of a machine for that purpose, is to sow it from out of the rear end of a wagon, the sower using both hands while the team is moving at a slow walk. In this way thirty to forty acres can be sowed in one day. The quantity used may be from 150 to 300 pounds per acre, but the larger the quantity the better."

Malaria, Chills and Fever, and Bilious attacks positively cured with Keith's Malaria Cure Pills—an infallible remedy: never fail to cure the most obstinate long-standing cases where Quinine and all other remedies had failed. They are prepared expressly for malarious sections. In mailing boxes, two kinds of Pills, containing a strong cathartic and a chill breaker, sugar-coated; contain no Quinine or Mercury, causing no griping or purging; they are mild and efficient certainties in their effect and harmless in all conditions; effectually cleanse the system and give new life and tone to the body. As a household remedy they are invaluable. For Liver Complaint they are equally known, and will have a wonderful effect on the worst case. They are now prescribed by Physicians, and for sale by Druggists everywhere, or sent by mail, on receipt of price, 25 cents per box, or five boxes for $1. Address, Keith's Malaria Cure Co., 1 Barclay street, New York.
