A Sad, True Story.

Some time since, a gentleman, with his wife and two children went to Cedar Keys, Florida, for the benefit of his health. He was in the last stages of that terrible malady, consumption, and the family boarded at the only hotel in the place. For several months remittances came from Baltimore to them; not much, but sufficient to pay their board. The salt breeze from the Gulf of Mexico brought no healing balm to the sufferer, who continued to grow worse, and the time came when the remittance ceased. Letters to Baltimore failed to elicit funds, and want stared the little family in the face. The landlord waited for some time, but finally with saddened heart, told his unfortunate boarders that his means did not enable him to support them longer and that they must remove. With no funds and no friends the little family, taking with them such scanty bedding as a hotel keeper could spare them, sought refuge in a miserable hovel near by, which had been rudely constructed of refused boards, as shelter for the negro hands sometimes employed at a neighboring mill.

Here the sufferer rapidly grew worse, and the young wife and mother, who hitherto had never known want, but had been surrounded by the luxuries of life, was compelled to go out upon the sea shore to gather oysters and catch crabs to furnish food for her loved ones, who were all unable to render her any assistance. What a picture for a painter or a poet—a tender woman, with love and sorrow in her heart, and care on her fair brow wading, with shoeless feet, and hair all unconfined, in the green water of the sea, whose waves, more kind than man, washed to her the food she sought for herself and those helpless dear ones, who waited for her coming in the dreary hovel—Tennyson or Whittier might immortalized her in verse.

Besides seeking for food for the family, she was compelled to carry heavy slabs of wood from the mill for fuel, and, indeed, all the care of the household devolved upon her.

There came a day when the life which had been but feebly pulsing through the consumptive's veins was fast dying out altogether. The eyes which had shone brightly, and looked with such ineffable love, such tenderness and hopelessness upon the gentle companion of his suffering, were growing dimmer and dimmer, and the wife knew that the messenger had come at last. In the gloom of their wretched home, and while the surges of the gulf seem to moan a solemn miserere, the wife and mother, with her two little ones, stood by the bedside of the being she loved, the husband she had tended with such wonderful and beautiful devotion. He was sinking fast to that realm where the "weary are at rest," when a knock at the door announced a visitor. The person calling handed the lady a telegram containing the information that her husband had by a recent decision, come into possession of an ample fortune. The glad tidings came all too late, and fell upon the ear of the dying man all unheeded. He was past all earthly aspirations, all earthly aid.

Through the village the news spread like wild-fire, and—sad mockery of human sympathy and kindness—the people flocked to offer their services. Some bore fruit and others took clean bedding and clothing. The object of their sudden solicitude was even then expiring, and before he could be moved his eyes closed, to open in a better world. What need to speak of the sad burial by the sea side, of the children's sobs, the widow's anguish. It was soon over, and the lady obtaining funds soon started for her home in Baltimore.

FEEDING YOUNG TURKEYS.—One may about as well feed young turkeys hot embers and brimstone as coarse, uncooked Indian meal. And yet thousands of people attempt to rear their turkey chicks on such unsuitable food as raw meal and water. For twenty-four hours after a chick has burst the shell it does not want an atom of food. Colts, calves and lambs, as soon as they spring into life, make and effort to obtain nourishment from the natural source of supply. But chickens and young turkeys are nearly "stone blind" for more than ten hours after they are hatched. To supply the necessities of such a little bundle of life, nature has so provided that only a short time previous to the termination of the period of incubation the breast and crop of the embryo chick shall open sufficiently, by some clonic spasmodication, to allow the yolk to be drawn into the little crop. This fact shows that young birds of every kind should be supplied with soft and delicate nourishment, such as boiled eggs, curd, thick mush made of equal parts of wheat and meal, with sweet milk. Young chicks should never be confined to either of the foregoing kinds of feed. They like a small quantity many times daily.

Queen Victoria has intimated her intention to offer in competition to the female artists of all nations a prize of £40 for the best fan painted or carved, by a lady under twenty-five years of age. The fan must be exhibited at the international exhibition next year.

The Germans o Pittsburg have notified the radical leaders that they can no longer vote the Radical ticket. They say they think this negro business has been carried about far enough.

Eleven hundred cows are used in Pleasant Valley Wisconsin, in the manufacture of cheese. The capital is $49.500, and 550,000 pounds of cheese are made in a season.

Mrs. Reuben Reddish, a lady aged seventy-two years, residing in Ralls county one day last week killed twenty-two rattlesnakes, some of them the largest killed in that section for many years.

Walter Green, of Marple, Delaware county, has raised a lemon which measures in its widest circumference, 13½ inches, is 6 inches in length, and weighs one pound and a half.

A man recently ate fifty lemons on a wager. When his widow returned home from the funeral she said it was a shame to waste so many lemons; they would have made such excellent pies.

SPRING CAMPAIGN OF 1870.
TERRIFIC TUMBLE IN GOLD!
Dry Goods away down below old prices!
REVOLUTION!
CARPET BAG PLAYED OUT!
Sauve qui peut. Quem deus vult perdere.
Smash of Eighty-seven Dry Goods Houses in February!

ONE THOUSAND cases of Dry Goods thrown into the Auction Rooms every week
FOR THE ALMIGHTY DOLLAR.
Two Hundred Cases of Domestics every day
FOR THE EVERLASTING DOLLAR!
Crowding everything into the Auction Rooms. Converting every available article into Gold.
This is our battle-field—Here where we fight the old fogies, swindlers, high prices, monopoly and speculation—and here we shall some day in the not far distant future, crush them.
STAND FROM UNDER!
Read these unanswerable lines and save your money. Standard Prints, 10c; Standard Muslins, 12½c; all fifty cent Dress Goods at 25c; seventy-five cent Dress Goods at 37½c.
EVERYTHING DOWN ABOUT HALF.
Pins, 3c; Needles, 3c; Hooks and Eyes, 3c. Ribbons and Velvets less than half price. Laces and Embroideries about quarter price. Best 200 yard Spool Cotton, 3 and 4c.
The entire stock from the failure of C. H. Bowman & Co.—upwards of one thousand dozen Handk'fs, at about 28 cts. in the dollar. About half the Notion Stock of Payne, Foster & Brink, of 32 Leonard street, 32 cents in the dollar. Large share of Zinn, Aldrich & Co. Bulk of Loder Bros. & Co., Broadway. Thus they have gone down in the pitiless storm, and we have watched and embraced the hour of our opportunity to gather the fruits of the victory. Through the inevitable Auction Machines, they have gone crashing by hundreds, and thus in the general smash, we have with money, sleepless energy and brains, gathered in these grand and splendid drives.
THIS IS ABOUT THE STORY:
Here lies the power of the Almighty Dollar. We live in the Auction Rooms day and night. Through these avenues are cleared out day after day, thousands upon thousands. It is the principle of buying under the relentless hammer of the Auctioneer, for a half, quarter, or tenth their value, entire stocks, and in turn giving them to the people at a small advance, that has built up this enormous business.
A few short years ago we came out of the fighting ranks—penniless; aye, poorer than poverty itself, and to-day we are the monarchs of the Auction Rooms.
Like sheep we have driven them. We have the inside track, and shall hold it.—The old tale, "Goods at Cost," avails nothing when we give them away at one-fourth gold cost. Everything below its market value. The Syren Song of the swindler is played. They must learn how to buy and how to sell, or go down. Everything down upon the panic basis. Twelve dozen Buttons for 4 cts. Ante Bellum prices no where. Why waste your money when you can save it? Such goods at such prices will at once and forever drive into obscurity every man, who, in these dark days of panic and poverty, has the face to ask a profit upon his goods. Eternal curses upon a man who would rob the people now. Linen Handkerchiefs, 6c. Hair Nets, 3c. Envelopes, 4c. for 25. Best Writing Paper, 10c. Hosiery in every variety, about 40 in the dollar. Terrific breakdown in Notions.
White Goods from failure of McDonald and McCauley, 114 Walker street, 40 cents in the dollar.
And thus it is that we are enabled to clear out goods at less than other merchants can buy them. Carpets and Oil Cloths—grand panic here. Then on with the ball. Deal where you can get the best goods for the least money, and call upon us often and get posted.
