Historical Types.

The historian will please most and instruct fully when, in the progress of his theme, he pauses to present types of representative character, and enables the enquirer to draw his own conclusions from the contrastive portraiture.—Washington, declining all testimonials and gifts, stands out in bold relief in his era, while Napoleon, made Consul for life, aspired to be Emperor, and disdaining to be crowned by Pious VII, put the crown of France on his own head and on that of Josephine. Further, he blotted out the Cis-Alpine Republic, and invested himself with the titular supremacy of the Kingdom of Italy. He placed his brother Joseph upon the throne of Spain; his brother Louise upon that of Holland; and his brother Jerome, whose infamous abandonment of his Baltimore wife was an insult and wrong which the United States should have resented, upon the throne of Westphalia. The magnificent victories of Napoleon, stuccoed with his avarice and ambition, excite less respect for man than the humble victories of Washington, (humbler only in the numbers engaged) illuminated by the settings of his republican simplicity and sublime moral virtues. The one, whether first in war or not, certainly was first in peace, and certainly is first in the hearts of his countrymen. The other, although first in war, spared neither man in his wath, woman in his lust, nor God in his piety.

Historical parallels repeat themselves, always, however, with modifications Here, now, is Grant and Lee. They are the two conspicuous soldiers of our era. The one victorious, powerful, and President; the other defeated, without power, ostracised from citizenship, and clothed with less direct political rights than the negro who grooms his famous steed. Besides, Grant is rich, and Lee is poor. With these facts giving the conduct of the two men affords a suggestive subject for reflection — Houses, farms, money, annuities, valuable gifts and testamonials have been thrust upon Lee without number; houses, farms, money, annuities, valuable gifts and testimonials have been politely but absolutely refused by Lee, as uniformly as if the fellow belonged to a higher sphere and wanted to show us how the gods can do fine things. There is one solitary exception; he did take money once. At the close of the war five hundred dollars in gold was sent to him by certain admirers, who notified him it was a debt due for his services in the field. Lee took the money and gave it to the friends of Jefferson Davis to defray charges of counsel for the great Prisoner of the Casemate. Upon what meat doth the man feed that such things can happen?

Houses, money by the hundred thousand, ocean cottages, fast horses, segars enough to fill a tobacco warehouse, whiskey and wines sufficient to start an enterprizing liquor merchant in the wholesale trade, puppy dogs, swords, canes, and such matters innumerable have been showered upon Grant with all the munificence of princely merchants, and all the sharpness of those who "buy and sell," and without intending to falsify the record of history in one tittle, we believe we can say that there is no authenticated evidence of the fact that General Grant has anywhere refused to accept one single gift of value.

These two men are types. It is not for us to draw conclusions. Take your choice—the recluse of the Virginia school-room, who refuses to accept anything that he does not earn by contract, and who once wrote to his son that "Duty is the sublimest word in the English language;" or the President of the United States who refuses to accept nothing from a palace to a puppy, and once wrote to Sheridan to scourge the smiling Valley of Virginia to that extent that a "crow flying over the country would be compelled to carry his rations with him or starve."—Prince Georgian.

HORRIBLE OUTRAGE NEAR LAUREL, DEL.—A correspondent in Laurel Del., sends the Salisbury Eastern Shoreman of last Saturday the following:

On Tuesday last a negro man named Ben Johnson, said to be a fugitive from your town, but temporarily sojourning between this place and Sharptown, followed a respectable married woman of the neighborhood and little daughter into the swamp whither she had gone for the purpose of picking whortleberries, frightened the child away and then perpetrated the most heinous possible act upon the mother, violating her person in the most bestial manner The husband of the injured woman and about a dozen of his neighbors surrounded the villain's house through the night, and on Wednesday morning found him under the building nearly buried in the soil. The infuriated husband attempted to take summary vengeance, but was restrained by some of the considerate persons. The fiend was brought to town the evidence of the outraged wife having been taken at the house, and committed to jail by Justice Tyre to await trial at the October term of court. While here he acknowledged several similar offences, which we knew to have been perpetrated and attempted in the neighborhood without being able to detect the author of one upon the person of a young white woman, about four miles from town, last spring. It is some consolation to hope that the foul deed of last Wednesday is the villain's last.

Not the least notable indication of President Grant's unfitness for the high station he occupies is the unsuitableness and incompetency of the men he selects for office. The latest illustration of imbecility in this respect is the nomination of one John M. Oliver to be Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. According to the Washington Republican, an administration paper, this nomination has elicited a protest from the members of the Washington bar, without distinction of party, and the Senate Judiciary Committee is asked to report against the nominee's confirmation. The protest sets forth a want on the part of the nominee of the requisite legal qualifications for an efficient discharge of the duties devolving upon that branch of the Court over which the new Judge will preside, and it affirms that, so far as the signers can ascertain, he has never studied law regularly, either under a practitioner or at a law school, and that he has never been admitted to practice by any Court.

CONGRESSMEN AT LARGE.—Is the title to many editorial articles in Western papers about these days. It takes the place of the phrase of old times, "the schoolmaster abroad." The reason that so many Congressmen are found at large in the West is because there are so few penitentiaries in regions where land-grabbing, Indian treaty knavery and corrupt jobs generally are the principal occupants of the M. C.'s.

A young lady being asked whether she would wear a wig when her hair turned gray, replied, with great earnness, "Oh, no, I will dye first."

An editor of a paper in Indiana wants to know if modern whiskey was ever seen "comin, thro' the rye?"

SPRING CAMPAIGN OF 1870.

TERRIFIC TUMBLE IN GOLD!

Dry Goods away down below old prices!

REVOLUTION!

CARPET BAG LAYED OUT!

Sauve qui peut. Quem deus vult perdere.

Smash of Eighty-seven Dry Goods Houses in February!

ONE THOUSAND cases of Dry Goods thrown into the Auction Rooms every week

FOR THE ALMIGHTY DOLLAR.

Two Hundred Cases of Domestics every day

FOR THE EVERLASTING DOLLAR!

Crowding everything into the Auction Rooms. Converting every available article into Gold.

This is our battle-field—Here where we fight the old fogies, swindlers, high prices, monopoly and speculation—and here we shall some day in the not far distant future, crush them.

STAND FROM UNDER!

Read these unanswerable lines and save your money. Standard Prints, 10c; Standard Muslins, 12½c; all fifty cent Dress Goods at 25c; seventy-five cent Dress Goods at 37½c.

EVERYTHING DOWN ABOUT HALF.

Pins, 3c; Needles, 3c; Hooks and Eyes, 3c. Ribbons and Velvets less than half price. Laces and Embroideries about quarter price. Best 200 yard Spool Cotton, 3 and 4c.

The entire stock from the failure of C. H. Bowman & Co.—upwards of one thousand dozen Handk'fs, at about 28 cts. in the dollar. About half the Notion Stock of Payne, Foster & Brink, of 32 Leonard street, 32 cents in the dollar. Large share of Zinn, Aldrich & Co. Bulk of Loder Bros. & Co., Broadway. Thus they have gone down in the pitiless storm, and we have watched and embraced the hour of our opportunity to gather the fruits of the victory. Through the inevitable Auction Machines, they have gone crashing by hundreds, and thus in the general smash, we have with money, sleepless energy and brains, gathered in these grand and splendid drives.

THIS IS ABOUT THE STORY:

Here lies the power of the Almighty Dollar. We live in the Auction Rooms day and night. Through these avenues are cleared out day after day, thousands upon thousands. It is the principle of buying under the relentless hammer of the Auctioneer, for a half, quarter, or tenth their value, entire stocks, and in turn giving them to the people at a small advance, that has built up this enormous business.

A few short years ago we came out of the fighting ranks—penniless; aye, poorer than poverty itself, and to-day we are the monarchs of the Auction Rooms.

Like sheep we have driven them. We have the inside track, and shall hold it.—The old tale, "Goods at Cost," avails nothing when we give them away at one-fourth gold cost. Everything below its market value. The Syren Song of the swindler is played. They must learn how to buy and how to sell, or go down. Everything down upon the panic basis. Twelve dozen Buttons for 4 cts. Ante Bellum prices no where. Why waste your money when you can save it? Such goods at such prices will at once and forever drive into obscurity every man, who, in these dark days of panic and poverty, has the face to ask a profit upon his goods. Eternal curses upon a man who would rob the people now. Linen Handkerchiefs, 6c. Hair Nets, 3c. Envelopes, 4c. for 25. Best Writing Paper, 10c. Hosiery in every variety, about 40 in the dollar. Terrific breakdown in Notions.

White Goods from failure of McDonald and McCauley, 114 Walker street, 40 cents in the dollar.

And thus it is that we are enabled to clear out goods at less than other merchants can buy them. Carpets and Oil Cloths—grand panic here. Then on with the ball. Deal where you can get the best goods for the least money, and call upon us often and get posted.

Read! Remember! and Never Forget!
