GREENMOUNT

The young people's conference for Carroll county was held in the Greenmount church on Thursday, April 29. The meeting was attended by about 40 young people from the different parts of the county. A number of older folks attended the night session. The meeting was held under the direction of Colonel Cudlipp who is employed as the young people's worker for the state of Maryland. In the afternoon he divided the session into two periods and told the young people in the first period about organized classes and the work of the different officers. The second period was spent in studying the subject of worship. At night Colonel Cudlipp first showed a number of pictures describing the work of Camp Royal, which is held under his leadership and competent instructors along the South river for the young people of the state. After showing the pictures a council fire was held in the Sunday school room. This was new to most of the young people and was very much enjoyed.
