type that the average evangelistic singer will not attempt to teach the children. Prof. Bond has the peculiar power of training children along this line and has added several numbers to the coming program that will be inspirational as well as entertaining. Carroll county ought to boost her own "kiddies" who are thus helping in the great work of evangelism.

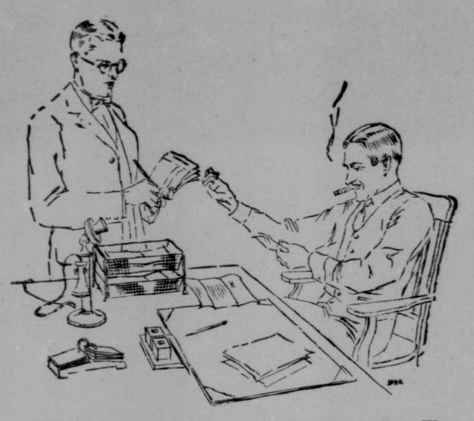

For the first time, Sunday morning the Tabernacle will be open to the public. Dr. Stough will begin a series of Sunday morning quiet talks on "The Place of Prayer and Faith in the Conflict with Unbelief." His first sermon will be "Breaking the Drought." A cordial invitation is extended to the public to participate in this meeting.

Sunday afternoon will be the third of the series of lectures to "Men only." The evangelist has chosen for his subject, "Bootleggers and Other Skunks," with an apology to the animal that bears that name. Three thousand tickets are being distributed in order to supply enough to take care of the men of Carroll county and adjacent territory. New York State hailed Dr. Stough as the man whose messages brought about New York State's local option law. Prof. Bond will be assisted by a men's chorus and will use for solo numbers, "Molly and The Babies," also "I Married the Bootlegger's Daughter" if the music for same can be secured by the committee.

The doors of the Tabernacle will be opened at six Sunday evening and as soon as the crowd gathers Prof. Bond will start the song service. The message will be delivered at 8:15. As most seats are taken at 7:15 it is advisable to come early. The committee will make a few more changes in order to seat larger numbers at this service. One section is reserved for mothers with babies and small children and another for older folks. The ushers have been instructed to be courteous and it is expected that the public will render the same treatment in return. A large delegation is expected from Harrisburg during the day.
