UP AND DOWN THE Eastern Shore

Praise for Delmarva

Salisbury—The Delmarva Peninsula last week got advertising it could never have bought when Nina Wilcox Putnam writing in the Saturday Evening Post described "The Coastal Route to Florida". The duPont Highway, Dover, Salisbury, Chincoteague Island and the Cape Charles Ferry came in for especially favorable mention in an outline of the first day's New York-to-Norfolk drive. "The roads are grand, there is almost no traffic, no advertising signs, no hot-dog stands and none of the cheap honky-tonk usually found along the big highways," Mrs. Putnam wrote of the Peninsula.

Oversight

Chestertown—The U. S. Government it seems has overlooked the "slight formality" of paying for the site on which Chestertown's new $70,000 postoffice is to be erected. When contractors moved in last week to raze the old Bibb Hotel as the first step in construction, Thomas W. Eliason, Jr., who sold the property, held up work pending receipt of checks totaling $15,500.

Horse Thievery Declines

Rising Sun—Organized fifty six years ago primarily to protect its members against horse thievery, the Rising Sun Detective Association has voted to disband. "This is now almost a thing of the past", opined one of its members, "and the organization has practically nothing to do." Thus the automobile had scored another victory over Old Dobbin.

No. 1 Man

Berlin—For the greatest contribution to the civic welfare of the community in 1935, A. P. Christopher, secretary and treasurer to the Mayor and City Council has been voted the winner of the annual award of the Berlin Men's Association. Mr. Christopher was the mainspring in bringing a sewerage system to the town.

Disappearing Sawmill

Pocomoke City—Last Thanksgiving William Laws closed down his sawmill near Nazareth Church in Atkinson District. When he returned recently to inspect the premises the sawmill had vanished from the spot, including a 3½-ton boiler, engines, stack, brickword and all appurtenances thereto. Following an extended search Lawrence Adkins stands charged with hauling it away and Lee Taylor, present owner, must answer to the Worcester Grand Jury for receiving stolen goods.

Fireman's Portrait

Federalsburg—A large portrait of J. Raymod Charles, former vice-president of the local fire company and president of the Delmarva Volunteer Firemen's association who died last July, has been presented to Federalsburg firemen who will frame and hang it in the municipal building here.

Collapsible Running-Board

Henderson—A folding running-board that lies flush with the side of the automobile when the doors are closed has been patented by A. Hofacker. The inventor hails it as a curb to highwaymen who would mount the running board in a hold-up. Hofacker is a native of Germany who moved here from Cleveland, Ohio, several years ago.

Joins Crisfield Post

Crisfield—Mrs. Mayne A. Collins, delegate to the General Assembly and President of the Somerset County Woman's Democratic Club, has joined the advertising staff of the Crisfield Post.

Old-Age Crisis

Princess Anne—Fearing exhaustion before June of Somerset County's $12,000 budgeted for Old Age Pensions if payments continue on the present basis to 53 applicants with 700 more to be investigated, the Board of County Commissioners have called a halt on all payments until a new survey is made. In some instances $32.25 is being paid while the State law permits a maximum of $30.

For Services Rendered

Denton—To show their appreciation for assistance when flames destroyed five buildings here last month, Denton firemen entertained Greensboro's smoke eaters at a venison dinner with all the trimmings. Later the local theatre threw open its doors for a free movie.

Lost Oysters

Deals Island—Along its current list of broader problems the Public Service Commission of Maryland has drawn one perhaps less grave but nevertheless knotty. On Dec. 10 the Tilden-Webster Company, local packers, shipped two barrels of oysters to a Baltimore restaurant, which failed to arrive. Last week the packers sent the P. S. C. the shipping receipt, asked for help in locating the oysters.

Bond Issue Sold

Salisbury—Wicomico County's $100,000 bond issue for remodeling the courthouse and jail has been sold at a rate of $100.39 with interest fixed at 2¾% which officials consider reflects credit on the county's financial condition. Retirement starts in 1947.

Goes National

Chestertown—The second local fraternity on the Washington College campus to go national within a year was announced last week when Alpha Kappa's petition for membership in the National Order of Kappa Alpha was granted. Oldest organization at the Shore college, affiliation has been sought for ten years.

Buoy Swept Away

St. Michaels—Flash buoy, located at the west end of Herring Island and one of the main guides to St. Michaels oystermen, was carried away by the recent freeze and break-up. Watermen are clamoring for its replacement.

Cotton in Somerset

Princess Anne—A handful of Carolina cotton seed planted in the backyard garden by Mr. and Mrs. Milton L. Thawley has yielded two gallons of the staple.

Levee Breaks

Chesapeake City—A ten-foot section of Bethel road washed away and dredging operations came to a standstill when a leveee along the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal broke under the weight of mud and water.

Isnt' It Wonderful Jane . . .

BEING ABLE TO BUY A REGULAR $2.98 SILK DRESS FOR ONLY $1.00."

JANE—"Yes, Mary, and did you see those other 98c House Dresses at 50c. I don't see how they can do it.

MARY—"Well, I'll tell you how they do it, Jane, they never carry merchandise over from one season to another . . . they mark it down to nearly what it costs them, and they win a lot of new friends that way.

JANE—"So that's how they do it. I have always wondered how a low-priced store like the Remington Store could keep there stocks so complete and there fashions up-to-date."

MARY—"I always feel safe in stocking up at a Remington Clearance Sale—I have never found them to mark any of their prices up for a sale—but always honestly marked-down.

JANE—"I hate to rush off, Mary, I'm going straight home and make a list of the things the rest of my family needs.

MARY—"That's not a bad idea—I believe I'll do the same thing.

JANE—"Fine—then I will see you at the Remington Store, Thursday morning at 9:00 o'clock, before the crowds arrive.
