land for his leadership. He was an indefatigable worker in behalf of the people, and as his friends who are now seeking his entrance in the Congressional race point out, his service in the Legislature has not been forgotten and a man of his ability, his fortitude and integrity, can well be used in Washington at this time.

"All during his membership in the General Assembly Mr. Milbourne was an outstanding worker for conservation and the seafood industry and worked industriously for the interests of the fishermen and oystermen, not only in his own county, but the entire Shore and State. His battles in their behalf gained for him a large following of friends in all the tidewater sections of the State in both the Democratic and Republican ranks. In 1934 this same group of friends prevailed upon him to become a candidate for the United States Senate, but owing to his connection with the United States Treasury Department, he refused to allow his name to be used.

"Friends supporting Mr. Milbourne point to the fact that he has always been a staunch supporter of his party, and owing to his fair and impartial treatment to all, his friendship extends to men of all walks of life."

Extension Head Has Plan For U. S. Farmers

Dr. Symons Would Set Basic Allotments Through Producer-Owned Co-Ops

would be given the difference between the general sale price and the parity price on his basic production only."

Funds for such payments, he suggested, might be raised by either special or general taxes, or other constitutional means.

In his opinion, this proposal does not differ essentially from the policy that has existed in industry in this country for years, wherein the tariff has insured to manufacturers prices that would return a profit on reasonable production. No one associated with agriculture, he asserted, and no farmer desires from the Government subsidies or benefits that are not common to other citizens.

The farmer desires to maintain his freedom to act in production, as well as in other activities.

Among the advantages of the proposed plan, it was stated that it would eliminate the general criticisms of possible regimentation of agriculture and control of production, and at the same time avoid a return to conditions wherein the agricultural industry was seriously jeopardized. It is urged also that the plan would be readily adaptable to changing conditions.

"I admit", Symons says, "that I wish we could wholly adapt the plan of marketing milk through producer-owned co-operatives to wheat, corn and other crops. This would be ideal and is the end toward which we should work, but it is too optimistic, I fear, to urge the adoption of that plan as an immediate substitute for the adjustment program. It would require the effective and immediate organization of each group into marketing cooperatives for each commodity." In this connection, he pointed to the fact that the marketing agreement provision of the Adjustment Act has not been referred to by the Court.

Even before the Supreme Court decree, he states, all agricultural authorities had agreed that, with the passing of the emergency resulting from the depression, a long-time program should be the next step in providing for the future prosperity of the farming industry.
