Brown, now of Jacksonville, Florida, and the late Susan Mathias Brown. Death was due to emphysema, caused by a puncture in the esophagus, made by a foreign object. A very small chicken bone was swallowed last Wednesday evening which began causing great pain. Mrs. Weaner was rushed to the Mercy Hospital, Baltimore, but all efforts to find the bone were futile. She was brought home late that evening. Mrs. Weaner went to bed and was confined there until her death on Monday at 2:00 A. M. The puncture in the esophagus, caused a severe swelling, produced by air diffused in the cellular tissue. This condition is very rare, and all efforts of the specialists were in vain.

Dr. Wagner had both confirmed and married Mrs. Weaner. His talk, which was very comforting to the sorrowing relatives, was based on the text, "Be Still And Know That I Am God," and "She Hath Done What She Could," the latter the expressed desire of Mrs. Weaner's father. Dr. Wagner paid great tribute to Mrs. Weaner, in saying that she was a woman of high ideals and always lived up to those ideals. The many floral tributes were proof of the high esteem in which she was held.

The pallbearers were, Edward Mathias, Frank Mathias, Oliver Mathias, Robert Mathias, Walter Shoemaker, and Robert Geiselman, all cousines of Mrs. Weaner. Interment was in Evergreen cemetery.
