In Memoriam

EVANS-KNIGHT—A tribute of love to the sacred memory of Our Dear Mother, MARY G. EVANS who departed this life May 16, 1928 and my dear husband, WADE H. KNIGHT, May 27, 1930.

It's lonesome here without you
And sad the weary way,
For life is not the same to me
Since you were called away.

At home in The Beautiful City of God
In the valley of rest so fair,
Some day when our tasks are over
With joy we shall meet you there.

BY HER LOVING CHILDREN
AND LONELY WIFE.

CHRISFIELD—In memory of our dear Mother, Mrs. Mary E. Chrisfield who departed from us May 11, 1934.

Well do we remember
When we stood beside her bed,
And saw her pass away.
Her busy hands were folded
Her work on earth was done,
Her eyes so soft and gentle,
Her soul without one stain
Her lips that smiled so sweetly
Her form that suffered pain,
Her feet by angels guided
To our Father's Mansion fair.
The flowers we placed upon her grave
May wither and decay,
But our love for her who sleeps beneath
Shall never fade away.

By Her Loving Children,
MRS. ROY W. PHILLIPS
GEORGE E. CHRISFIELD.

Harris Sees State Losing Seafood Trade

our markets. As our supply decreased, the industry in desperation put out a poorer product, while competing territories with larger productions improved their proudct and captured our markets. Some of our leading packers have been purchasing New England oysters to fill their orders for 'selects.'"

His comments on the crab, shad, striped bass and perch situations were not any more encouraging. Of the crab he declared that the supply this year will be only thirty per cent. of the 1931 supply, recalling that "five years ago the Chesapeake supplied practically all the crabs caught in the United States."

"Today the Baltimore fish market is being supplied with crab meat from the South, while our own industry, with thousands of dollars invested in boats and equipment and hundreds of families dependent upon it, is practically idle.

"As with the oyster, Crisfield crab packers are purchasing Louisiana crab meat and reshipping it to their customers in order to hold their markets, which, of course, they will lose eventually unless crab production is increased quickly."

As a solution of the problem of Maryland's depleted seafood supplies, Mr. Harris looked to research such as is being done in the Chesapeake Biological Laboratory at Solomons, Md., under the direction of Dr. Reginald V. Truitt.

It was his opinion that the scope should be broadened and that the Conservation Department "with the proper advisory assistance, should be given certain discretionary powers over the sea-food industry."

Dr. Truitt supported Mr. Harris' views. He also stated that Maryland did not produce a single gallon of counts, or top grade of oysters last year and that watermen take the oysters before they have time to grow into selects or counts.

The old issue of private against public plantings was an outcrop of the discussion, the view being presented that public development has led to stagnation and the hope for the future lies with private planting.
