A New Leaf

Diminutive Ann Leaf, who has been absent from New York during the past year fulfilling picture engagements on the west coast, recently returned to resume her broadcasting activities. Ann is a veteran CBS performer, having first made her debut over this network in 1929. The organ's three manuals and wide range of foot pedals comprise a lot of territory to cover for a young lady who is only 4 feet 11 inches tall, but Ann is one of the country's outstanding musicians. She is heard over the WABC-Columbia network Mondays from 7:00 to 7:15 P. M., EDST, Wednesdays 3:00 to 3:30 P. M., EDST.

BETWEEN DIALS

By GAGER WASEY

Women really interested in beauty advice and the care of their health should tune in any Wednesday morning to the "Lamplighter" program at 11:15 A. M. (WOR) and hear a short talk by a famous woman commentator Caryl Varni on the subject of my lady's health and beauty.

—o—

It is hard to believe that the terrible noises that are heard thruogh the mike when Jack Benny tries to play "Love In Bloom" can come from an $8,000 violin; but it does. The fiddle belongs to Lou Kosloff, first violinist in Johnny Green's band. It is a good bet that Kosloff won't own it long.

—o—

Jack Hylton (from merry old England) and his famous Continental Revue band includes a blind piano player, Alec Templeton. Lionel Barrymore is really doing a good job as music commentator in the Sigmund Romberg air show where he explains in every day language the history and the meaning of music which is about to be played. There doesn't seem to be anything the versatile Barrymore can't do when it comes to acting.
