Republicans Gain 133 In Registration

Trend To GOP Seen In Fourth And Fifth Districts

A Republican gain of 133 featured the three registration days for the addition and removal of names from the voting lists of Queen Anne's county, according to unofficial tabulation of the results for the seven districts. The gain represents an increase of 94 in Republican registration and a drop of 39 in that of their rivals. However, the Democrats rolled up a commanding lead in the total of new registrations, securing 581 to their opponents' 244.

The Republican gains were small but general all along the line except in the Second District, embracing Church Hill, where the Democrats posted an advantage of 53, and in the second precinct of the Third District, where the Democrats led by 21. In the Third District as a whole, however, the G. O. P. nosed out a slight lead of 4.

The big swing for the Republicans came in the Fourth District, including Kent Island, and in the two precincts of the Fifth District, Queenstown and Grasonville. Here the turnover piled up a gain of 129 for that party.

In the absence of a general registration leaders o nboth sides scanned the results for possible clues. Edwin H. Brown, Jr., chairman of the Democratic Campaign Committee, was unconcerned about the Republican gain. He pointed out that the Democrats maintained their traditional lead of more than 2 to 1 in new enrollment and said registrations indicated that new voters were still showing a heavy preference for the Democratic party.

Duer Closes Crab Season On October 31

Keeps Pact With Virginia S. G. Harris Approves, Sees Future Gain

In accordance with the Maryland share of an agreement with Virginia, Chairman Robert F. Duer of the Maryland Conservation Commission has lopped off a month from the crabbing season making the closing date October 31.

Sterling G. Harris of Centreville, secretary of the Tri-State Seafood Association, believes that the early closing of the Maryland crabbing season will have far-reaching effects in improving the Bay supply, especially if the protective measures now employed by Maryland and Virginia are continued and enforced from year to year.

Said Mr. Harris, last winter at a conference held in Annapolis, Virginia representatives headed by Richard Armstrong, Virginia Commissioner of Fisheries agreed to consider the banning of sponge crab catching in Virginia provided Maryland agreed to close its crab season on October 31st instead of November 30. It was contended by Mr. Armstrong that Maryland should do this to protect the pregnate female crabs which migrate down the Bay during September, October and November to the spawning grounds and which form about 80% of the crabs caught in Maryland during this period.

"Acting on this plan of cooperation, the Marylnd Legislature immediately enacted a law vesting the Maryland Conservation Commission with the power to declare the month of November, 1936 closed for the taking of crabs.

"Every person interested in conservation should applaud this initial effort of inter-state agreement on conservation. I am certain it can be done effectively and permanently, in fact, our Association is calling a meeting of men from both states engaged in the crab industry for the purpose of working out a program of future crab conservation to the Legislature of Maryland and Virginia for adoption.

"Unless such cooperative action is taken and a workable policy adopted for the future between Maryland and Virginia, our entire crab industry will be practically wiped out by the competition of low-priced crab meat from southern states. Our only way to meet this competition is to bring back the large supply of crabs in the Chesapeake Bay."

Seek WPA Aid For Repairs At 5 High Schools

Commissioners Approve Day's Plan For Plastering, Painting, Wiring

A WPA project covering extensive repairs and improvements to the five high schools of Queen Anne's has been drawn up by County Superintendent F. D. Day and the Board of County Commissioners approved the proposal at Tuesday's session.

It was learned also that District Engineer Elliott has reviewed the plans and that approval of the project is assured insofar as the District WPA office is concerned.

Total cost of the program is estimated at $12,559.90 of which the County will bear $2,524.00.

The project includes painting both exterior and interior of the five high schools. Other work to be done, includes:

Stevensville Hih School—Waterproofing and plastering of walls with the proper insulation to lessen the problem of heating.

Church Hill—Wiring for electricity. Metal ceilings to be insulated.

Sudlersville—Wiring, insulation of metal celings, and extension of the heating system to the Home Economics and agricultural rooms. Repairs to defective plastering.

Countians Jam Courthouse For Huge Democratic Rally

Hear Goldsborough, Johnson, Sasscer Assail Landon-Knox Hoover, Praise Roosevelt. Dollar Wheat To Reelect F. D. R., Says Johnson

Queen Anne's Countians jammed the courtroom to capacity, stood in the aisles and banked the hallways and stairs at the courthouse Tuesday night when Democratic orators fired their biggest guns of the campaign at Governor Alf. M. Landon, Col. Frank Knox and the "twelve long years" of Republican rule.

Introduced by Campaign Chairman Edwin H. Brown, Jr., the Hon. Lansdale G. Sasscer, President of the State Senate; Congressman Luther A. Johnson of Texas, and Congressman T. Alan Goldsborough, who seeks reelection, all tock turns at riddling the Republican high command, present and past, as well as the forces arrayed against the reelection of President Roosevelt.

Mr. Goldsborough reviewed in detail, quoting dates, the many visits he and his colleagues had made to the White House during Hoover's term to recommend methods by which the wheels of industry could start running again to turn back the tide of an ever-deepening depression.

All these remedies, Mr. Goldsborough said, fell upon deaf ears. Had Hoover been reelected in 1932 there would have been a revolution, he asserted.

In defense of New Deal spending, the Congressman said not one dollar of real wealth has been destroyed in this country since March 4, 1933. All debts are here at home. Nothing will have to leave the country to pay them, he pointed out. He referred to the national debt as only a matter of bank bookkeeping.

On March 4, 1933, the value of 800 corporate stocks were listed at a total value of nineteen billion dollars. Today these same stocks are valued at fifty three billions. The difference, he said, represents a value of three times the increase in the National debt, under Roosevelt.

Congressman Johnson, in defending the New Deal's policies, said money had been spent into every nook and cranny of the country to start the wheels of industry turning instead of sending the money to Wall Street to sift down to the masses.

The only Republican Mr. Johnson came anywhere near praising was the late Mark Hanna. And that praise only concerned Hanna's astuteness as a prophet. He quoted him as saying that no president has ever been defeated for reelection when wheat was selling for a dollar.

The Texas Congressman said Mr. Goldsborough was as much responsible for bank deposits insurance as any man in Congress.

Senator Sasscer praised Rooevelt as the man who gave the people of this country new hope and confidence. He said that confidence dated from the day of Roosevelt's inaugural address. The Senator from Prince George's county said the only issue before the American people is whether they want to go on with Roosevelt or back to Hoover and all he stood for. He repeatedly characterized Governor Landon as an "invisible man" who had been thrust forward by press agents to front for the same old crowd.

Shore All Stars To Clash Here On The Sabbath

Perry And Friel Line Up Pick And Pride Of Peninsula

Jack Perry and Jim Friel, friendly enemies in county baseball, are going to debate their differences in brilliant fashion next Sunday. And the "debate" will take place on the Centreville diamond at 2:30 P. M.

Jack was humiliated no end a couple of months ago when he undertook, on short notice, to round up a ball club to pin back the ears of Jim's Queenstown Terps. The Terps on that occasion, it will be remembered, set back an alleged Centreville aggregation 13-0.

Now Perry has loaded again and Friel hasn't exactly stood still. In fact Friel won't use the name "Terps" on his collection of artists.

It will be Jack Perry's All -Stars vs Jim Friel's All Stars. The pick and pride of Delmarva talent has been rounded up—the best ball players on the peninsula.

Here's Perry's ensemble: Howard Pfund and Eddie Turner, of Washington College; Paul Scully, Townsend; Hickey Fountain, Henry Baxter and Jack Stanley, of Federalsburg; Reds Penman and Brick Holloway, of Milford; and Tony Hudson and Hump Campbell of Princesss Anne.

Friel counters with: Ed Nichols, Tug Schelberg, Bill Rinehart and Casper Clough, of the Terps; Addis Copple, Ding Boyce, Lee Christopher and Dizzy Lord, of the Feds, Zula Gray, Princess Anne, and Zip Legates of Milford.

Of course Paul Scully and Hickey Fountain will handle the mound chores for Perry. Addis Copple and Tug Schelberg will be Friel's riflemen.

It ought to be a humdinger of a ball game. There's murder in all the muskets and mystification from the mound.

Come out to the high school green Sunday and watch the immovable meet the irresistable.

Cordova Swept By Costly Fire, $20,000 Loss

Four Companies Aid In Checking Midnight Blaze. Origin Unknown

The worst fire in the history of Cordova swept through the business district of the small Talbot county town early Friday morning, destroyed six buildings ,including the old Town Hall and wreaked damaged estimated at $20,000 before being brought under control by the combined fire fighting outfits of Cordova, Easton, Denton, St. Michaels and Ridgely. The insurance was relatively small.

The blaze started from undetermined origin in the Morris second-hand store which had been closed for several days while the owner was in a Philadelphia hospital and his wife and family visiting him there.

The building destroyed included the Morris store, the Morris home adjoining, the Harry Hopkins general merchandise store operated by Miss Helen Hopkins, the Hopkins home, a vacant store owned by L. M. Carter and the old town hall, owned by Mrs. Grace Leonard, which was also unoccupied.

The blaze was discovered before 2 o'clock by Mrs. Annie Lee Roe who notified W. W. Slaughter. The latter summoned the Cordova fire department. One glance at the flames showed Chief Alec Helmer the gravity of the situation and he promptly called Easton, Denton, St. Michaels and Ridgely for assistance. These departments responded in less than a half an hour and succeeded in confining the fire in the block of its origin. At the time a strong wind endangered the entire town. The firemen battled the blaze for more than two hours before getting it under control.

Oyster Survey Gives Hope For Better Season

Love Point Area Rates High. Watermen Find Culling Hard

Following an inspection tour of most of the Maryland oyster beds by the State Conservation Commission, Judge Robert F. Duer, chairman of the commission reported encouraging prospects for the season with the likelihood that the tongers would make money this year. However, individual reports for the upper Chesapeake Bay region were far from rosy, dead oysters, small oysters and catches hard to cull appearing generally throughout the survey.

The Love Point area stood out with about the best prospects of any of the bars and rocks itemized. After dragging in the area the Commission summed up conditions as follows: Love Point—about 100 bushels daily on outer edge of rock. The run about half selects with some mussels. Meat good. The hill about the lighthouse has lots of small oysters in good condition. The inner edge of the bar has a fair supply of large oysters with many mussels.

The survey showed a larger supply than usual of small oysters which are expected to fatten up with colder weather. Flood waters in the Spring caused heavy mortality among the large oysters, yet tonging grounds are well stocked with marketable bivalves with prices comparatively good.

Kent Island watermen are finding conditions running fairly well with the general report. They are making fair catches of small oysters which grade well for their size and are bringing satisfactory prices.

The chief complaint is that culling is a hard task. Two watermen who were fined in Police Court this week for having 12% or more of unculled oysters said that Chester River bivalves were very hard to cull. They said further that if all catches were sorted down exactly to the legal limit it would be difficult to get a good day's take and that if the cull law were absolutely enforced practically every waterman would be in danger of arrest.

The evening's entertainment will begin with a delicous supper served from 5 o'clock until 8 o'clock. After the supper will come the Grand March when all the little and big folk will parade to stirring march music.

The first hour of the evening will be devoted to children and their specialties with the adult proram following. Separate prizes will be awarded to children and adults.
