SMALLWOOD

Mr. Willie Conaway took his mother and kinfolk and some of his and their friends on a trip to Washington and Mt. Vernon in one of his fine busses. The writer was one of the number. There were 37 in all. The day was spent very pleasantly, owing to the kind and courteous way Mr. Conaway has in handling a crowd. We went by the way of Baltimore, arriving in front of the capitol at Washington. Most of the guests got out and went through the building. Along the Potomac driveway we went until we came to the place where tourists may eat their meals. Dinner was served and enjoyed by all. Why shouldn't they? A finer dinner could not have been had at a first-class hotel and the scenery was lovely. A lovely green spot in the bend of the river was selected, the river as a background, airplanes were flying around to make us think of the wonders that are accomplished by man through the goodness of God. When all had viewed the lovely scenery away we went to Mt. Vernon, another beauty spot. One of the finest spots along the river for a home. What a lovely home Washington did have, no wonder he was tired of war and political life and glad to return to such a peaceful home as Mt. Vernon. When the party had seen all they cared to, we started for home by a different route. We passed through Rockville, Ridgeville, West Friendship, Sykesville, Eldersburg and home again. As the bus started from Mr. Charles Wagner's there is where it returned, then on to Westminster. The day and trip will long be remembered by all as a pleasant experience in one's memory.

The Deer Park picnic was a great success both socially and financially, although the day alternated between sunshine and showers.

Mrs. Rosa Aldridge has visiting her her cousin from Ohio.

Mrs. Richard Baker has guests from Philadelphia, Miss Carrie Plack and Miss Janette Nelson, of Baltimore.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Beauther, of Philadelphia, took Mrs. Baker, Miss Carrie Plack and Miss Janette Nelson to Washington sightseeing.

Sunday school and church at Deer Park Sunday morning, the Juniors, Intermediates and Senior C. E. societies at night. Everybody come even if warm, for after awhile you will want to stay away because it is too cold.

Threshing seems to be the order of the day in this vicinity. Wheat is turning out fairly well.

A number of our people are faithfully attending the tent meetings at Providence.

STEERS FATTENED ON BARLEY DIET

That there is a place for barley in the Minnesota cattle feeding program was shown when the results of feeding experiments were reported at the annual Cattle Feeders' day exercises at University farm near St Paul Minn. W. H. Peters, chief of the animal husbandry division, presented the conclusions drawn from the series of experiments carried on 175 days

Ground barley full fed to one lot of ten steers proved very satisfactory, said Professor Peters, although the gains did not quite equal the gains made by another lot of ten which was given a full feed of shelled corn Whole barley, on the other hand, fed to a third lot of ten, proved very unsatisfactory, demonstrating that barley must be ground to be fed profitably. Each lot received in addition to the test feeds a basic ration of two pounds o. linseed meal per head daily and alfalfa hay and corn silage, both full fed.

The trials were important, said the university man, because many cattle are being raised in sections of Minnesota where corn for grain is not a regularly successful and profitable crop. If barley can be used successfully in these localities for fattening cattle for market, then stock raisers can add materially to their incomes Professor Peters also explained that there are advantages in growing barley for cattle even where corn is a successful crop.

Another experiment reported made it clear that there was no appreciable advantage in grinding and mixing shelled corn and dry roughage for fattening yearling steers when fair to good quality of feeds were being used. Steers fed the whole feeds for the purpose of comparison proved more profitable than those fed the ground mixed feeds.

Market Now Established for Little Lambskins

Commercial value has been established for little lambskins. Heretofore lambskins have been a total loss It is reported that a limited outlet has been found for these skins. Hide buyers through the Northwest are buying them. The fact that a market now exists permits the sheep owner to salvage a small profit from the lamb loss. According to reports the older the lamb the better the skin as the wool is longer. Those who are familiar with the market demand for lambskins say that the skins should be stretched out flat. The skin should not be cased but should be tacked up against a wall or board to dry but should not be stretched too tight. Price quotations range from 25 to 75 cents each for these skins.

Poll Evil and Fistula Caused by an Infection

Poll evil and fistulous withers are caused by the infection of the parts affected after an injury. This leads to pus formation and the death of part of the tissues involved. If the infection is slight, treatment of one kind or another may be successful Even then several months may be required for healing, writes Dr. L. Van Es in Capper's Weekly.

In cases of long standing, with painful swelling and abundant pus discharge, the outlook is not promising Even good surgery often fails to effect a cure. Even in cases which eventually heal, the length of time necessary for the treatment often exceeds from three to nine months, rendering the procedure expensive. It takes a valuable horse to be worth the treatment

Live Stock Notes

Raise long-bodied hogs, and the packers can pay you more for them They dress out a little heavier than short ones and have more meat and less lard.

* * *

Pasture may be the determining factor in whether or not farmers make a profit from their hogs this season Pasture is especially important for young pigs.

* * *

Allowing hogs to burrow into a straw stack and pile up there, to come out steaming hot into the cold, is inviting trouble. It causes pneumonia, hog flu and other ills.

* * *

Lambs that are docked are much more attractive to buyers and command a higher price than do undocked lambs. The docking should be done when the lambs are seven to fifteen days old.

* * *

Most times a simple mineral mixture is as good for hogs as one that reads like a couple of veterinary prescriptions.

* * *

A well-built central hog house is a very desirable thing to have, but a cheaply constructed shed can be made to serve the purpose.

* * *

Many successful cattle feeders increase the amount of cottonseed meal or cake or other similar product during the last 30 to 60 days before cattle are marketed.
