ETHEL BARRYMORE IN "THE KINGDOM OF GOD" AT MARYLAND THEATRE

Miss Ethel Barrymore, who has not been seen in Baltimore for four years, her last appearance was in Pinero's "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," opens Monday night, November 5, at the Maryland Theatre, Baltimore, for a week's engagement, matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. Her new play, "The Kingdom of God," is by the famous Spanish dramatist, G. Martinez Sierra, and has been adapted by Helen and H. Granville Barker. The latter, well known in England and the United States, is an actor, dramatist and producer.

"The Kingdom of God" is a play of modern Spain by the author who is best known to the American playgoers by his "Cradle Song," first produced in New York at the Civic Repertory Theatre and also seen on tour. "The Romantic Young Lady" was also produced in New York, at the Neighborhood Playhouse two seasons ago. Senor Sierra has written over 40 plays which have had life on the stage, and he has made nearly 50 translations of other plays from several languages, including English, French, German and Catalan. He has made translations of Ibsen, Masterlinck, Shaw and others. His non-dramatic works are over 30 in number. In addition to this huge output he has been an editor, and, for the last 12 years, a producer. Sierra is only 47. In the spring of 1927 he brought his own company of players from their home theatre in Madrid, the Teatro Eslavn, and produced several of his own plays along with those of other dramatists in a brief engagement in New York. This appearance followed a tour of the Latin countries which began in the spring of 1926. The second tour is now being made of South America.

H. Granville Barker, who, with Helen Granville Barker, adapted "The Kingdom of God," is a noted English dramatist and producer whose plays and productions have been seen in America as well as in London.

Working with a wide array of characters and scenes Senor Sierra has built a drama of singular beauty and power, offering Miss Barrymore, a role of splendid opportunity to display the dramatic powers which have long made her welcome to American playgoers. The settings are by Watson Barratt.

Miss Barrymore's present tour, including only a few cities, is being made during the last weeks of work on the new theatre in New York which Mr. Lee Shubert is building as a tribute to her. At the end of this brief tour Miss Barrymore returns to New York for the gala opening of the Ethel Barrymore Theatre.
