Five Practices Are Basic For In Good Soil

The good farmer wants to keep his soil fertile and productive. Five steps are of first importance, some more important in one region than in another. Each is a relatively simple parctice.

As outlined in "Soils and Men," the the Yearbook of the United States Department of Agriculture, these five fundamentals are:

Suitable tillage, correcting soil acidity in the humid regions, providing an adequate supply of phosphorus, using mechanical measures to control erosion where rotation and covercropping are not sufficient, and maintaining the supply of organic matter, principally by the use of proper rotations and cover crops, including legumes.

These fundamentals apply to general farming in most regions. In some areas erosion is not troublesome. Other farmers, particularly in the western part of the country, have little or no need for limesreaders. Special crops and special areas present special problems in water supply—drainage or irrigation. Other farm lands require special attention to supply certain minerals other than phosphorus.

But these, according to the Yearbook article, are usually supplementary to the five fundamentals of good soil management—tillage, human supply, liming, phosphorus replacement, and erosion control.

Other features of the show will be planned. The stage will be used for an outdoor display of golden and silver pheasants with the setting created under the direction of Clarence E. Woodward.

There will be a game exhibit along the south wall showing both inland game birds and waterfowl. The latter exhibit will be combined with a showing of stuffed specimens to acquaint young hunters with species of wildfowl which may be hunted and those which are protected. This exhibit will be arranged under the direction of John P. Corcoran.

The main part of the drill floor will be accorded to coops of chickens and turkeys. Cooping will be handled by a committee under the chairmanship of Dr. James W. Crowl.

A corn show under the sponsorship of the F. F. A. chapters and 4-H Clubs of the county will feature not more than seventy-five entries of corn raised in the county this year together with a special showing of a new hybrid variety to be shown without competition by Guy E. Harmon, manager of Blakeford Farms.

Poultry Breeding Expert Is Self Taught

then became more enthusiastic about Rhode Island Reds. He subscribed for the Rhode Island Red Journal, sold subscriptions for it until he earned a cockerel as a reward. Then he obtained Red pullets.

His first real step into the purebred and ultimately show field was indirectly due to Snowden Thomas, postmaster at Chestertown. Mr. Thomas bought a pen of Reds which placed first at a Missouri sow. Jack got a cockerel from the pen and it really started him. He bred the cockerel to his better pullets and headed for the show coops.

Mr. Moffett was meticulous in his records about his birds. He kept track of egg yield and money return, his customers, his incubators and the birds themselves. When he reached the point of selling prize birds he recorded the prices, the highest of which was $45 for a single bird.

He named his best chickens in those days and carefully entered their descriptions in a book. The names, incidentally, were taken from the great pacing and trotting horses of the day, Peter the Great, Peter Volo, Long Nine, Sadie Mac, Ruth Dillon, with Woodrow Wilson also honored and a fine pun used in the name Mrs. Beau.

He described his birds for his own satisfaction as follows:

Snowden: Is an extremely dark surface, fine even surface, clean under color, fine colored flights, not heavy in black, large bone, good red eyes, fair comb, fair type and very vigorous, a wonderful colored breast.

Jersey Queen: Is a handsome colored hen in both surface and under color fair type good red eye, weak in wing and a fine layer. Her color is the equal of most any pullet.

Cady is a handsome (underscored) type and colored hen with large bone fair comb fair eye. This is a grand good hen in every respect. Her equal on type would be hard to find.

Mr. Moffett has quite a collection of ribbons, but chiefly blues and special. His birds placed at the top. He occasionally relates how he waited for the mail when he first entered Snowden and how thrilled he was with his first winner, which was Snowden, an excellent male of that day.

Mr. Moffett was a consistent enthusiast for better poultry. He was the first man in Maryland to have a bird tested for pullorum, which every one does now. He is rated tops for selection of birds for show purposes and breeding them. He developed the strain of black turkeys at Pioneer Point Farms, a breed hard to establish because of its low fertility. Where he found the breed hatching one out of fifty, he now gets a 90 percent hatch.

His hobbies are gunning, pitch, and formerly harness horses. But at all times he is a poultryman, ably qualified to raise, show and judge better birds.

Soccer Tilt Will Be Played Under Lights

Kent and Queen Anne's county will face off for the first game leading to the Eastern Shore championship. Stevensville high school girls will journey to Rock Hall that afternoon to face the Rock Hall fieldball winners.

The Rock Hall boys, also winners in their county, will meet whichever team proves Queen Anne's champion in a game to be played within this county.

None of these games have any connection with the Armistice Night match. yet because the all-star team is not selected may have a bearing upon the lineup for the floodlight tilt.

Church Hill Boy Given Maryland Farmer's Key

Marion Leiby of Church Hill high school was awarded the gold key of the Maryland Farmer Degree at the State meeting of the Future Farmers of America at a meeting Thursday evening at Frederick. The banquet and meeting were held in the Hood College Dining Hall and were attended by approximately 400 F. F. A. members, agricultural teachers and others.

Marion Leiby is the third Church Hill high school boy in three years to receive the key and one of twenty from the entire state to be a recipient this year. Six county boys have been so honored three from Church Hill, two from Sudlersville and one from Centreville.

Sudlersville Girls Win Final Game

Sudlersville high school fieldball team defeated Church Hill 11-2 at Church Hill Tuesday afternoon to give the Sudlersville lassies their first victory of the season and leave three schools tie for third place in the final standing.

With prospects of a dismal record facing them the First Distirct girls whipped up their attack and shot four goals and a penalty through the Church Hill goal, Marie Shields getting two field goals and Anna A. Roberts, Lola Morris, and Lois Stevens one each.

Stevensville had already won the championship with an undefeated sweep for eight points. Centreville had six points in the final standings for second place with Tri-County, Church Hill and Sudlersville marking two each.

Proceedings of the Orphans' Court

The Orphans' Court met Tuesday in regular session with Chief Judge Henry H. Evans and Judges Palmer C. Pippin

—o—

Petition in regard to the estate of Anna D. Sharp to transfer title to an automobile and order of court thereon were passed and recorded.

The will of Sarah Catherine Coursey was offered for probate and admitted. Letters of administration c. t. a. were granted to Frederick N. Coursey. Warrant to appraise the real estate was issued to J. Wesley McKnett and W. R. Phillips.

Bed-Ridden Boy Host At Hallowe'en Party

Sherwood Harris was host to a few of his little friends Saturday afternoon at a delightful Hallowe'en party. Sherwood is recuperating from an illness and was unable to attend the big party at the Armory Friday night, so his guests tried to make up for some of the pleasure he had lost in celebration of the holiday.

Those present were Anna Hudson, Bobby Elzey, Billy Perkins, Bobby Randall, Erald Shea, Bobby Barton and Marion Harris.
