To Hold Sanity Hearing

Chestertown—A hearing to determine the question of release of Mrs. Thelma Buxton, wife of Dr. Kenneth Buxton, from Spirngfield Hospital where she was committed following a trial for murder of the mother, of Dr. Buxton in 1935, will be held by Judge Ridgely P. Melvin at Annapolis on April 29. Mrs. Buxton killed her mother-in-law with a hatchet and was acquitted by reason of insanity at a trial shortly afterwards. She has since been confined at Springfield.

TWO VIEWS OF SHIRLEY

Shirley Temple's newest film, "The Little Princess" is setting box-office records, say the lads from the Rialto who keep their fingers on the public pulse as registered by the cash register. Above are contrasting views of Shirley, gay in pretty clothes in the early scenes of "The Little Princses", sad as a little slavey when skies darken. The picture will be shown at the Stevensville Opera House tonight, Thursday, and Friday evenings.

STARR

A few of our up-to-date farmers have been plowing for corn. But the heavy rain on Sunday made them slow up this week.

The general discussion here among neighbors is who will be the next Congressman at Washington for the Eastern Shore. We are in hopes that the right man will secure the nomination.

The farmers in this community have lost a number of dogs with the distemper. A few valuable hounds and beagles which the owners have been offered fancy prices for during the gunning season.

The first snake to be seen this season was plowed up last Saturday afternoon . It measured about three and a half feet. Notwithstanding the cool, damp weather, it seemed very much alive and tried to battle with the one who finally killed it.

Most all of the residents who signed the soil conservation papers were called to the County Agent's office last Saturday to sign papers in order to receive their first payment on the wheat contracted for 1939.

Miss Mary Emerson a nurse in St. Agne's Hospital, of Baltimore, spent one day last week as the guest of her father, Mr. William Emerson.

CARE OF CHICKS

Any plan for building money-making pullets must begin the day the chick is hatched and carry on through until the pullet is in the nest. The starting period and the growing period are equally important. Any let-up in care from the time the check is hatched until the pullet reaches laying age is costly. To to get big pullets that lay big eggs give your chicks every chance to go ahead.

In the first place, decide how many chicks you can raise. This will be determined by the equipment you have and the amount of time you can devote to the job of raising chciks. There are lots of people, who at this time of the year seem to get over-ambitious and rush into chick raising ventures without careful planning of the year's program of work. Later on they find themselves in a muddle of necessary work that can't be carried on without additional help and usually the chick suffers. This in turn results into poorly developed pullets which most always turn out to be unprofitable. Right here is why poultry in general is thought to be unprofitable.

A good plan to follow if you have the equipment necessary to do it is to start three chicks in the spring for each pullet you expect to house in the fall. This plan allows for two-thirds cockerels, culls and mortality and one-third good, choice, strong, healthy pullets.

There are several ways of getting your chicks, but the trend seems to be more and more towards buying of good chicks from reliable hatcherymen and breeders, paying enough to get good stock. Few poultrymen have ever made money buying cheap chicks. Cheap chicks usually come from poor breeding stock, and poor breeding stock invariably produces poor chicks.

Select a hatchryman who can show egg laying and breeding records behind the flocks from where the eggs come. Also select a hatcheryman who can assure you of a profit on your investment if you give the chicks the proper care and management.

There are certain things which you should look for when buying baby chicks such as: vitality, breed characteristics, uniform size, and color, well-healed navel, freedom from disease, ability to live and grow and uniform pigamentation.

Most of these qualities are inherited characterics which make it all the more important that you know what kind of breeding stock produced the eggs from which your chicks were hatched.
