Spring Garden Purchased By Chas. S. Quimby

Estate Held Continuously By Ancestors Of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Perry

The Spring Garden estate near Centreville which has been in posession of ancestors of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Perry as far as records are available was purchased on Friday from the John Mackey Perry heirs by Charles S. Quimby at private sale. Mr. Quimby plans to move to Spring Garden next year.

The farm consists of three hundred acres of land and a fine old brick home. Spring Garden is rated as one of the richest and best farm lands in Queen Anne's. For the past twenty-five years it has been the home of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Perry.

Back in the latter part of the 18th century Spring Garden was the home of Colonel William Hopper, great-grandfather of the late Judge Philemon B. Hopper and also a great-great-grandfather of the present Mrs. John W. Perry.

Colonel Hopper was prominent in the early history of Methodism in Queen Anne's and it was at Spring Garden that he entertained on several occasions in 1784 Bishop Thomas Coke, who had been ordained bishop by Wesley himself, and who had been sent to America to assist Bishop Asbury in establishing Methodism.

Spring Garden was purchased from Colonel William Hopper, who died in 1806, by ancestors of John W. Perry and it has remained in that family's possession until the sale last week.

John W. Perry, a leading citizen of the latter 19th century, lived at Spring Garden for many years before building a home in Centreville. Mr. Perry was one of the county assessors under the assessment law of 1876 and was a charter member of the old Queen Anne's National Bank.

His son, John Mack Perry, took over the residence at Spring Garden when his father moved to Centreville and maintained his home there until his death, when it passed into the joint possession of his children, Mrs. Ella P. Skinner of Bronxville, N.Y.; Mackey P. Beck, Mrs. Bessie P. Kibler, Mrs. Frances P. Metcalfe and Mrs. Isabel P. Wilmer, all of Chestertown, and John W. Perry of Centreville.

Wilbur Elliott, Pondtown negro, was sentenced to sixty days in jail on a charge of assault following a fracas at his home in which two women were forced to take a shotgun from him. One of the women, his sister-in-law, Elsie Elliott, was struck in the head by the butt of the gun as the man swung it around. He was jailed for the assault on her.

His common law wife Dorothy Collister was also bruised in the scuffle. Sentence on that charge was suspended.

Farmers Increase Use Of Livestock Laboratory

Free Service Offered To Residents Of Four Counties. Queen Anne's Sends In Most Calls. Pet Rabbit Sent To Determine Source Of Illness

Farmers from the five upper Eastern Shore counties are gradually becoming aware of the services provided them by the Livestock Sanitary Service Laboratory at Centreville and are steadily increasing their number of calls upon the Laboratory. During the first three weeks of June approximately sixty cases were brought to the attention of the Service.

The majority of these cases came from Queen Anne's with Kent and Talbot next, then Caroline and Cecil. The service of the Laboratory are of course free but even then, according to the director, Dr. Cunningham, it will take about two years for farmers in the five counties to become familiar enough with the Laboratory to keep it running at top speed.

Most of the cases submitted thus far dealt with poultry. They are being sent in by farmers and veterinarians with county agents collaborating with the farmers. One inquiry came from Dorchester county.

While reticent about discussing individual cases Dr. Cunningham remarked that there is considerable blackhead being found in turkeys, coccidiosis in fowl generally while many diseases that the Laboratory classes as expected are turning up. One unusual case submitted was that of a pet rabbit where the owner was losing several and wondering why.

Dr. Cunningham reminds farmers that the services offered are without charge and that they supplement the work of veterinarians. Where carcasses of poultry or small animals are sent in for autopsy to find out what was wrong he urges that these be sent in immediately. The time element is important since a day's delay may work changes which will obscure the causes.

Where a farmer suspects something wrong with a flock or herd he should bring it to the attention of the Laboratory at once. If the trouble can be caught early it can usually be stopped before it runs through the entire flock. Where half the flock is dead by the time notice is brought the chances are great that the rest are well infected.

When trouble arises with a flock Dr. Cunningham prefers that the sickest specimen be submitted, a bird that is at the point of death or has just died. In the latter case the carcass should be as fresh as possible.

Large livestock can hardly be sent to the Laboratory for examination. Where there is suspicion of an outbreak of disease some one from the Laboratory may go out to investigate.

Discussing the Laboratory Dr. Cunningham says that it has the greatest amount of floor space of any of the branch laboratories, and the largest amount of an dbest equipment. This is in keeping with the fact that the five upper counties of the Shore have the largest amount of wealth invested in poultry and livestock of any area so served with the number and quality of stock the highest.

All sorts of general livestock laboratory work is done and beginning with the Fall a huge number of tests on poultry will be run.

Whenever a case is submitted to the Laboratory a complete report is sent to the owner of the animal or fowl giving the findings and suggestions determnied upon when the examination is completed.

H-QA Scouts At Pioneer Point

Return Home For Weiners, Overnight Camp

The Hillsboro-Queen Anne Boy Scout troop put in a busy day Saturday, being entertained at the Pioneer Point estate of Mrs. Helena S. Raskob during the day and returning for a weiner roast and overnight camp at Camp Raskob in the evening.

At Pioneer Point the boys found the estate beautiful and the wild life preserve intensely interesting. After a bountiful luncheon and a rest period the Scouts went swimming in the Corsica and later were served ice cream and cake.

The troop traveling by truck returned to Queen Anne about 6 o'clock. The weiner roast, to which several girls were invited, was held at 10 o'clock. Eventually the Scouts bivouacked in tents at Camp Raskob for the night.

Ben Raskob, 16-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Raskob, came to Queen Anne with the troop, was a supper guest of Charles Cannon Barton, leader of the Wolf Patrol of the Hillsboro-Queen Anne troop, and was an overnight guest of the troop at their camp.

Negro Halted On Ferry For Theft Here

Charles Lee, roving negro farmhand from Richmond, Va., was sentenced to thirty days in the County Jail by Police Justice J. Elmer Anthony in Police Court Wednesday for the larceny of $5 from the home of Charles S. Quimby near Centreville. The negro pleaded guilty.

According to testimony Lee, who worked for Mr. Quimby, took advantage of a brief absence from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Quimby on the morning of July 4, went upstairs to Mrs. Quimby's bedroom and took a $5 bill from her pocketbook. He changed the bill chiefly into nickels and dimes, hired a taxi to Love Point and was on his way. However, he was arrested on the ferry by Sheriff Edward Earl Coursey and Constable Louis Perkins. Mr. Quimby recovered $4.40 of his loss.

PRICE HAS DEER

Two deer were reported on the farm of Charles Clough near Price last week. While Mr. Clough and several of his men were getting in clover his son, Caleb Clough, noticed the animals in a far corner of the field eating the cut clover. Growers Urged To Try 10-Ton Tomato Club

Must Register With County Agent By July 15. Prizes For Leaders

While the tomato crop in Queen Anne's is expected to be smaller this year than for several years due to the failure of canneries to contract for the crop, several farmers may again be expected to enter the Ten-Ton-Tomato club contest. The enrollment deadline is July 15, which time those entering must have filed their names with County Agent Mark Miller.

Growers having from two to five acres will be included in one group, those with more than five acres in another. Gold watches or other suitable awards will be given to the growers making the highest yields in each group. Expenses of the winners will be paid to the Canning Crops Conference at the University of Maryland in December at which time awards will be made.

All growers entered who secure yields of ten or more tons per acre will be given certificates of membership in the club.

All Maryland growers who produce two or more acres of tomatoes are eligible but all tomatoes grown on any one farm must be entered with the total acreage. Yields will be determined from sales receipts and acreage measurements.

The grower must notify the county agent before the end of the season if the yield is estimated at ten or more tons per acre so as to have the field measured. Final yields of growers making over ten tons per acre must be reported through the county agent to the canning crops specialist by October 25.

Incidentally the grower is expected to report the methods used in growing the crop if the county agent evinces curiosity in that respect.

Appeal Veto Of Dredging Kent Island Narrows

Delegation Protests Ruling Of Army Engineer. Cite Benefits

A delegation from Kent and Queen Anne's county headed by Representative David J. Ward, Joseph W. A. Evans of Grasonville and J. Ramsey Speer of Trappe in Talbot county appeared before the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors in Washington last week to urge construction of a new and deeper channel through Kent Island Narrows.

The hearing was on an appeal from a recent adverse decision of the U. S. Army engineer on the project.

Mr. Evans presented oral arguments while Mr. Speer presented both oral arguments and filed a brief. Speakers declared that the Narrows is generally shunned by navigators along Chesapeake Bay. It was stated if a new straight channel is provided it would permit an expansion in the seafood industry in the Narrows area and give increased employment to a considerable number of people.

Mr. Speer's brief showed the present and prospective commerce that would accrue from the proposed new channel. It cited a saving in distance of more than seven miles between St. Michaels, Eastern Bay and Miles River to Baltimore, and more than nine miles for vessels destined for the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal and the upper bay.

The board also was informed that the present zigzagging channel through the Narrows not only is lacking in depth but constant shoaling makes it difficult to navigate. Many navigators, and especially yacht owners, avoid that waterway, it was stated.

Louis-Galento Fight Pictures To Be Shown

The official motion picture of the World's Heavyweight championship battle between Joe Louis and Tony Galento will be shown at the Stevensville Opera House Thursday and Fridya evenings, July 13 and 14, and at the Churchill Theatre beginning at the matinee Saturday afternoon, July 15 and continuing through Wednesday, July 19.

The consensus of opinion of sports writers was that the Louis-Galento brawl was one of the most exciting and thrilling battles for the heavyweight bauble. Slow motion pictures will feature the showing so that fans may decide for themselves whether Joe Louis fell—or was he pushed?—in the slambang third round when Joe's pants hit the deck and also give an idea why the fight was stopped when it was.

GUARD RIFLE MATCH

The annual state championship rifle matches of the Maryland National Guard and Maryland Naval Militia will be held at Camp Ritchie Saturday and Sunday.

Few Minor Accidents As County Marks Holiday

Automobile Overturn At Willoughby Injures Three. Boy Hurt By Firecracker At Church Hill. Shore Observes Safe, Sane Fourth

Queen Anne's county and the Eastern Shore played little part in the Nation's huge toll of 480 deaths and thousands of accidents which marred the celebration of the Fourth of July. One drowning in shallow water was the only death while fireworks and motor vehicle accidents were devoid of fatal endings.

The only serious traffic accident in Queen Anne's occurred on the highway from Queen Anne to Wye Mills when a car occupied by residents of Washington, D. C., skidded on the road in front of Gibson's store at Willoughby and overturned Tuesday afternoon about 4:30 o'clock.

The injured were Mr. and Mrs. Blaisdell and a passenger named Newton. Mrs. Blaisdell was the most seriously injured, suffering a fractured skull and injuries about the face. Mr. Blaisdell and Mr. Newton each received lacerations about the head and suffered from shock. All were given temporary treatment by Dr. Samuel J. Price of Queenstown, and transferred to the Easton Emergency Hospital. None of the three is in serious danger.

The lone fireworks accident reported in Queen Anne's county was that of Paul Cronshaw, 7-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James Cronshaw of the Church Hill vicinity, who suffered a hand burn from a cracker he thought a dud. The boy picked up the firecracker thinking its fire had gone out and was putting it back in his pocket when it exploded. The skin was not broken but powder sifted through. He was given an anti-tetanus injection by Dr. Norman S. Dudley.

The office of Sheriff Edward Earl Coursey had a quiet day. One negro was arrested for drunkenness and another for stealing which was the crop. Reports were received of a cutting affray near Willoughby which the Sheriff is investigating.

Otherwise Queen Anne's observed the celebration properly and with due precaution for life and limb.

The drowning reported at Ocean City was hardly a holiday casualty. Albert Luffman, 32, a Pittsville farmer, was found dead in less than two feet of water Sunday. He told his companions he would wait in the car while they went clamming and was believed to have suffered a heart attack while wading.

The most serious fireworks injury reported on the Eastern Shore was that of eight-year-old George Howard of Marion in Somerset county who was burned about the face while shooting off fireworks. He was taken to a Crisfield hospital.

A mother and her three-year-old daughter lost their lives in an early morning fire at Ridgely Sunday. The dead uere Mrs. Alverda Young and Mary young, colored people.

The blaze started from an explosion of a can of kerosene which Albert Young husband of the woman, was using in starting a fire. Mr. Young was badly burned in trying to save his daughter and his wife. The child died shortly after being admitted to Easton Emergency Hospital while the mother died on Monday. Three other children in the home at the time escaped.

Huge Federal Exhibit To Mark Poultry Display

Government To Show Activies Range At World Poultry Congress

Maryland poultrymen and others who attend the World Poultry Congress at Cleveland this summer will find in the United States Government exhibit the most complete display of the latest scientific findings and other activities of the government ever asembled in behalf of any industry, according to Wade H. Rice, specialist in poultry for the University of Maryland Extension Service.

The exhibit will occupy 18,000 square feet of space in the Hall of Nations, and will represent the work being done on poultry in 10 departments and independent offices of the Government. The exhibit is now taking definite shape in the exhibit studios of the Department of Agriculture.

The vast scope of activities of the Federal Government will be portrayed by photo murals which will completely cover the walls of the exhibit. New developments and the results of exhaustive research will be graphically presented by wax models, mounted specimens, animated displays, transparentcies, dioramas and other modern exhibit means.

A feature of particular interest will be the "talking turkey" which explains by words and animated diagram the assimilation and digestion of food, thus explaining the nutritive requirements of all forms poultry. The arguments of the talking turkey are adequately backed up by mounted specimens showing the various ill effects of improper feeding and by wax models showing the effect of diet on the skin color of various breeds of poultry.

Pictures, mounted birds, insect specimens, and other devices will show the effect of various insects and diseases and point to the latest methods by which poultry raisers can recognize and control the diseases.

One portion of the exhibit will show on moving panels the cost of poultry feed, number of eggs produced, and urban income for the last 18 years and how these factors affect egg prices. Visitors will be able to stop the panels at any point and study them.

Model poultry houses, how the Post Office Department handles parcel post shipments of chicks ,how other branches of the Government inspect poultry and eggs, and a graphic picture of importance of the poultry industry to this counrty, based on cenus figures and other data, will be among other important features of the exhibit.
