Slight Drop In Highway Deaths

Queen Anne's Free From Road Tragedies

Motor vehicle deaths in Maryland dropped slightly in July from figures for the same month a year ago, there being thirty-two fatalities this year compared with thirty-four in 1938. For the first seven months the death toll this year is larger, 220 to 207 a year ago.

Queen Anne's was again free of highway fatalities during the month, as were five other Eastern Shore counties. The Shore had but three road deaths in July, one each in Cecil, Dorchester and Wicomico counties.

Ten of the thirty-two killed in July were pedestrians, five of these being children. Of the thirty-five drivers involved twenty were charged with some form of bad driving although but two were held for grand juries. Operating too fast for conditions was blamed on thirteen, other faults being driving on the wrong side of the road, passing on a curve, cutting corner to left, disregarding stop sign and driving ahead when not having the right of way.

As usual most of the deaths came on Sunday and at night. Otherwise the fatalities were marked by features considered favorable to safe driving, good roads, dry weather, sound cars, sober, experienced drivers. Speed at night or on crowded highways was the dangerous feature.

Negro Arrested On Wheat Stealing Charge

Alleged to have stolen sixty bushels wheat from a farm owned by Frank Tarbutton near Sudlersville, Jim Ridgeway, Barclay negro, was arrested by Sheriff Edward Earl Coursey and Constable Louis Perkins. The wheat was taken from an unlocked shed on an untenanted farm.

A handful of wheat found in Ridgeway's car led to his undoing. The officers visited every mill inquiring if a negro answering Ridgeway's descripton had sold any wheat. A miller in Kent county recalled Ridgeway as having sold him wheat and the arrest followed.

To Hold School For Poultry Selectors

A school for the purpose of qualifying flock-selecting agents will be held at Denton August 29 and 30. Hatcherymen participating in poultry improvement work may attend the school and qualify as flock-selecting agents. All birds must be culled by such a qualified agent before a flock may be recognized as a Maryland U. S .Approved, Verified or Certified flock.

All permits or authority of flock-selecting agents to do official selection work under auspices of the Maryland Improvement Board granted at previous schools are now void and must be renewed this year. Hatcherymen, poultry breeders and hatchery flock owners who desire to do theri own culling and selection under the Maryland Poultry Improvement plan during the coming season should attend the school and pass the examination provided.
