Chest Clinics Conducted To Check Disease

Chance For Control, Recovery Good When Diagnosis Shows Illness

Chest clinics for the examination of persons who show indications of tuberculosis or who have been in contact with the disease, are held each month all the year round throughout the counties of Maryland, under the joint direction of the State Department of Health and the Maryland Tuberculosis Association. The clinics are made possible through the sale of the Christmas Seals . About 3,000 persons are examined at the clinics every year.

In announcing the plans for the clinics for the fall and winter season, Dr. H. R. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health said that the arrangements in each county are made by the County Health Officer and the nurses on his staff. The Queen Anne's clinics are held at the office of the County Health Department or a conveniently accessible health center and the schedules are planned so that every part of a county is reached several times a year. A special effort is made to reach persons, young or old, in whom the disease is just beginning ,or who may have been in contact with it, as well as to examine persons who have definite symptoms of tuberculosis.

Some of the patients are discovered by the public health nurses in connection with their services for other people who are ill. A great many are referred to the clinics by their own physicians. The examinations are made by physicians connected with the State Tuberculosis Sanatoria, or by the health officers or other physicians who have had special experience in the care of the disease. Portable X-ray machines are included in the equipment of all the clinics, making it possible to have X-ray pictures of the chest taken immediately in connection with the general examination.

The necessary treatment is advised on the basis of the findings in the examination and the X-ray pictures. Sanatorium care is recommended for some and care at home under medical and nursing supervision, for others. Last year, the public health nurses in the counties paid more than 15,000 follow-up visits to the homes of persons attending the tuberculosis clinics.

There is a good chance for recovery or for bringing the disease under control when it is discovered in the early stages, and treatment as advised by the clinic physicians is started early and faithfully followed. Complete information with regard to the clinics, the dates and hours for the examination, and the places at which they are to be held, can be gotten from the County Health Officer.

TURNER—REDOWITZ

A pretty wedding took place Friday evening, September 15, in Presbyterian Church, at Glenolden, Pa., when Miss Eleanor Redowitz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Redowitz became the bride of T. Carlton Turner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thompson G. Turner. Dr. Charles F. Deininger performed the ceremony.

The groom is the grandson of Mr. Frank W. Draper, sr., of Centreville, and the late Mrs. Draper .

George Hamilton presided at the console and accompanied Miss Sylvia Walters, the soloist.

The bride given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white marquisite over white satin, with appliqued flowers trimming the bodice which was cut with a high neck shape and short puffed sleeves and made on princess lines with skirt entrained. Her long veil of tulle with a face veil was held with a tiarra of pearls and brilliants. She carried a bouquet of white roses and baby's breath with a shower of ribbon.

Miss Judith Evelyn Redowitz, the bride's sister, was her only attendant. She wore a gown of blue net over blue satin, trimmed in pink velvet ribbon. She wore a headdress of pink veiling wtih blue velvet flowers. Her bouquet was of blue delphinium and pink roses with pink ribbon.

Franklin W. Turner was best man for his brother, and the ushers were Aldred Turner, a brother of the bridegroom, and William Sparks, jr.

A reception was held in the vestibule of the church, followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride wore a navy blue outfit as her going-away ensemble, and upon their return from a short wedding trip they will live at 511 Stiles street, Ridley Park, Pa.
