MD. SEA SOLDIERS AMONG NAVAL PIONEERS

Passing another milestone in their long years of service to the country, the U. S. Marines observe their 164th anniversary on November 10, the date that the Continental Congress authorized the raising of two battalions of sea soldiers in 1775. Sketches show uniforms worn by marines at various periods in our country's history.

Maryland's sea soldiers will be remembered by the U. S. Marines when they observe their 164th anniversary on November 10, for they were among the pioneer armed troops to serve aboard ship.

The Marine Corps places its birthday in 1775, mainly because the Continental Congress authorized the formation of two battalions of marines that year, but marines ,or citizens who served as such, appeared at a far earlier period in our country's history.

One of the first of these episodes was the fight of the Marylanders for the possession of Kent Island, which was held by William Claiborne, of Virginia in 1635, and whose presence there was the cause of several naval battles between "American Maritime Sea Soldiers" in that vicinity.

Trouble with Spain in the New World led to the formation of what were known as Gooch's and Spotswood's Marines in 1740, composed of men from several of the colonies along the Atlantic seaboard. Maryland contributed three companies to the organization, assembled for service in the neighborhood of the West Indies.

In March, 1776, when relationships with the motherland were strained to the breaking point, the British sloop-of-war "Otter" and two tenders were driven out of Chesapeake Bay by the militia and Maryland's armed ship ,the Defense. The Otter wanted to take aboard supplies and provisions. The citizens of Baltimore objected.

Captain James Nicholson of the Defense, with militia aboard as marines, and accompanied by several smaller ships bore down on the enemy and recaptured a prize taken by the Otter. The Otter sailed away and later captured another prize which ran aground, but the invaders were driven off by the fire of the Americans.

As a result of her ill-starred venture the Otter failed to conquer the Defense or to keep one of the prizes she had captured. Neither did she get the food supplies she wanted.

Later Maryland Marines helped to ferry troops across the Delaware River during Washington's campaign in the vicinity of Trenton, and accounts state that they performed "excellent service" on that occasion. During the Revolution blue hunting shirts were a distinctive part of the Garden Club Invited To Attend Lecture

The Queen Anne's Garden Club extends a cordial invitation to everyone to attend a lecture by Miss Irina Khrabroff on "Gardens of Balkan Royalties"—the remarkable gardens created by Ferdinand, the Botanist—King of Bulgaria, by romantic Queen Marie of Roumania, who realized her childhood dreams of planting wonder gardens wherever she went, and by Alexander, the Martyr, King of Yugoslovia, in whose country residences one sees combined his dreams of regal splendor and the primitive love of the soil, inherited from his peasant ancestors."

Miss Khrabroff may be said to possess a truly cosmopolitan personality. Russian by birth and temperament, American by residence and trailing, Serbian by marriage, and both Russian and American by education, she speal many languages and is familiar with many cultures. With such a background, it is not surprising that Miss Khraboff has achieved such an outstanding success in her lectures. She is sponsored by the National Council of State Garden Clubs and is everywhere most enthusiastically acclaimed. Her lecture is illustrated by slides which she has made and colored from pictures that she herself took.

This lecture will be given at the Queen Theatre in Queenstown, on Monday, November 13, at 2:30. A small charge of 25 cents a person will be made to help defray expenses. The public is invited.

A short business meeting of the Garden Club members will be held at the home of Mrs. Thomas Marsalis following the lecture at the theatre.

The lecture is being made possible through the generosity of the management of the Queen Theatre.

Tolles Talks To P-TA

Professsor Tolles Addresses Club; Proceeds Of Bazaar Announced

"Education has become governed by mass production," said Professor Winton Tolles of Washington College as he addressed the Centreville P. T. A., last week, "and is likely to destroy individuality."

Professor Tolles' talk concerned "Creative Expression" in which he told the P. T. A., the ways of creating individuality in their children. He listed them as inspiration, sympathy, and challenge. The meeting was held in the Centreville Elementary School last Friday evening.

The high lights of the talk was when Professor Tolles explained to parents and teachers that it was necessary for each child to have his own room or some corner that he could call his own and in this way, create a feeling of inspiration. He also brought out the value of constructive criticism regarding interests and work of children.

Professor Tolles, of the English Department of Washington College, had a one-act play, "The Vain Effort" published in "The Fifth Year Book of One-Act Plays" this summer. The play was published by Roe and Peterson of Evanston, Illinois, and was copyrighted in 1939. The play was successfully produced several years ago by the Washington Players.

Following Professor Tolles' speech was a short musical program furnished by Roy H. Wilson, William Green, J. Hall Barton, Walter Pfannenstein, and Rev. L. ColvinRandall, accompanied by Mrs. Randall on the piano.

A full report of the proceeds of the P. T. A. Annual Hallowe'en Supper-Bazaar and Dance was given. The event cleared $210 in all with proceeds turned in by the various committees as follows: Cake, Candy and Country Market, $75; Dance, $45; Supper, $90.

Mrs. John Palmer Smith, President, presided over the meeting. The theme of the meeting was in observance of American Education Week which was first sponsored just 19 years ago by the American Legion.

The lunch room was opened Monday, November 6, at 8:30 a. m. Mrs. Harry Boyles is dietician assisted by Miss Mildred Gunther and Miss McClements and two N. Y. A. girls. Ice cream and candy will be sold in the lunch room for the first time this year.

Mrs. Jester, First Grade teacher won the attendance award for the month. The next meeting of the P. T. A., will be held on Friday, December 1st. A Christmas program sponsored by the teachers of the school will be the feature of the meeting.
