OBITUARY.

There burst a noble heart. The philanthropist, the friend of the poor, of the distressed, of the widow and of the orphan is dead. WILLIAM W. ECCLESTON is dead. He died on Wednesday morning last, after a long, severe and painful illness, in the 62d year of his age. At this melancholy intelligence, a universal, wide-spread gloom has shrouded the community. He who but a short time ago was with us, in the pride of his strength, full of life, and health and joy, is now breathless in the tomb.

In paying this last solemn tribute of friendship to the sacred memory of the dead, ten thousand recollections crowd upon the mind of the writer; his soul glows like a furnace, and he could pour out his melting heart like water. The past rushes upon the memory. The image of the dead stands here before me. I behold his face. I hear him speak. I take him by his cordial hand. Alas! it is a dream. He is dead. His noble spirit has fled forever.

Who that knew WILLIAM W. ECCLESTON, will refuse to go to his grave and shed over it the mournful tear? Who can say, when the disconsolate and oppressed called upon him, that he ever turned them away? His hand was ever ready to help the distressed. The cries of the widow and the orphan never reached his ear, without receiving from his generous spirit immediate relief. When such men die their loss is irreparable. Though their mortal bodies moulder in the dust, time cannot obliterate their memory from the living.

The death of the subject of this obituary has occasioned universal sorrow. He was a father to the fatherless, a friend to the friendless, and whoever called on him in need was sure to receive his aid. The news of his death has operated like a thunderbolt upon the community. The house of mirth has been suddenly changed to the house of mourning, and distress has filled the minds of all for the loss of him who has gone, and never can return.

Endowed by nature with high intellectual faculties, possessing a noble and manly spirit, honorable in the highest degree, a warm and sincere friend, without the shadow of deceit or hypocrisy, he has ever been popular, and a universal favorite. Whatever he asked at the hands of the people, they gave it to him freely and with pleasure. They knew he was their friend, and therefore they delighted to please and honour him. They knew that for whatever they gave him he would always repay tenfold in return.

He has frequently represented the people of this county in the Legislature of Maryland. He has twice or thrice served them as an elector of the Senate of the State, and for many years past has discharged the duties of Register of Wills for Dorchester County. In all these capacities he has given universal satisfaction. In the service of the public he was uniformly obliging and accommodating. Even the timorous whispers of censure never assailed him. Intelligent, upright and vigilant, his sole object was to please his fellow citizens.

In his private life he was the most amiable of men. A kind and affectionate husband, an indulgent and devoted father, the warmest and sincerest friend, he was ever ready to sacrifice his own individual interest and comfort for the welfare of others. But he is gone forever. O merciful God! teach us to bow to thy almighty will. B.

In honor of the dead because of his virtue when living.

The citizens of the town of New Market, in Dorchester County, having received intelligence of the death of their long known and highly esteemed fellow citizen, Captain William W. Eccleston, of the town of Cambridge, a town meeting was immediately called and organized, by calling Samuel Sewell, Esq., to the Chair, and appointing William Vance Murray Edmondson, Secretary.

Dr. Zadock H. Rosse, in a brief and felicitous manner, communicated the mournful intelligence which caused the meeting. Every countenance reflected the grief which moved the speaker. He told them, this was the place of his nativity and early residence—Here were his early attachments and his never forgotten friends. In times of prosperity he calmly sympathised with them; when assailed by adversity he generously interposed and extended his liberal munificence.

It was truly gratifying to a virtuous mind, that every adult male inhabitant of the town, without distinction of party, attended the meeting, in honor of one who could no longer exert his accustomed and bountiful benignity. It was indeed a heartfelt and disinterested offering to the memory of departed excellence—such a spectacle must have a moral influence, and stimulate others to emulate his example.

The following resolutions were then offered and unanimously adopted.

Resolved, In the opinion of this meeting, New Market has lost its best friend, the county one of its most useful citizens, society one of its most accomplished members, and the cause of charity and philanthropy one of its most benevolent and abundant contributors.

Resolved, That the citizens of the town of New Market, in testimony of their regard for the manly virtue and elevated feelings which characterised the whole life of the deceased ano also as an evidence of their personal love and confidence, will wear crape for the next thirty days.

Resolved, That this meeting sincerely sympathise with the friends of the deceased in their late bereavement, and with them this meeting can truly say, that death can select no victim so dear to their affections, so important to their interests.

Resolved, That the President cause a copy of these resolutions to be sent to the family of the deceased, and that the same be published in the newspapers printed in the town of Cambridge.

SAMUEL SEWELL, President.
WM. V. M EDMONDSON, Sec't.
