feelings of Baltimoreans, expressly to raise a a mob that their friends might be put in power which was the case for one year. Those tenants not being able to pay the damage, the noble minded and generous Baltimoreans petitioned to have themselves taxed to pay Mrs White, but what was the conduct of the Federalists? they wished also that Hanson and Wagner should be paid when they were the sole cause of the mob. But my fellow citizens how different is the case of the late indemnity bill. The citizens of Baltimore are called contrary to their wish to indemnify a few favorites who have been directors and part owners of the bank of Maryland, and who should have been the guardians and protectors of the helpless orphans and widows who have lost there all, by their conduct. Let me ask you fellow citizens of Maryland if there is not a very material difference in the two objects? Mrs. White a poor helpless widow who had rented her house to Hanson and Wagner who at the time unknown to her, intended to produce a commotion in Baltimore for political purposes by which means her house was destroyed, and the citizens were willing by their petition to be taxed to pay her; and the other when some few individuals had enriched themselves by the deposits which were made (in the Bank where they were part owners and also directors,) by the poor draymen, washer-women, widows and orphans, who could save a few dollars from their daily labour to support their families in time of sickness and need.

Is there a man in the State who cannot feel an interest for the widow and orphan who have lost their all, and turned on the world without a dollar? Where is the man who has not a fellow feeling for the honest mechanic and labourer who had weekly deposited his honest savings in the Bank which held out to him an interest of five per cent, to support his wife and young growing family? Where is the hard hearted wretch who cannot sympathize with the lovely female orphan whose departed father had toiled and laboured for her support; who but can drop the tender tear for the widow whose all was in this bank and now lost, and gathered in the coffers of the rich stock jobber and Bank director, and who even refused to let the honest creditor see the books of the bank, and when they were unfortunately roused to desperation, to seek revenge for their lost all, the representatives of a free people turned a deaf ear to their entreaties and bid them begone,—dared to tax them to support and indemnify those who had rolled in splendor on their hard earnings—people of Maryland reflect and ponder.

Talbot county, August 12, 1936.

Mr. Sherwood.—In the notice I sent for a Temperance Convention at St. Michaels, and which has appeared in your paper, I observe the day is fixed for Tuesday instead of Thursday. This I have no doubt was a mistake o mine; and I must beg the favor of you to alter the notice, to make it read "on the first Thursday in September."

Frost in August.—The Albany Evening Journal says there was frost in that vicinity on Thursday night last.

Several of the Boston papers state as a rumor, that the female slaves recently rescued from the Supreme Court room have been carried to Halifax, against their own inclination.

PRICE CURRENT.

Wheat—There is no old wheat at market, and the new crop comes sparingly. The whole receipts of the week, it is computed, are scarcely enough to keep a single mill in operation The information which is daily reaching usin regard to the result actually realised by farmers, compels us to speak of the crop, not as a short one, but as an actual failure. In most of the cases where the wheat fields have shown a handsome growth of stalk and an apparently well filled head, the actual yield has proved only a fourth to a third of the quantity looked for. The quality, also, is far inferior to any thing heretofore observed in this market. Our prices for reds take a range of $1,25 a $1,75 per bushel, as in quality. One parcel was sold yesterday at $1,78.

Corn.—Sales of prime white at 81 a 88 cents and of prime yellow at 86 a 83 cts.

Rye.—Sales of new crop, as in quality, at 95 a 100 cts. A considerable parcel of German was sold at $1,05.

Oats.—We quote new crop at 32 a 35 cents and old at 37½ a 39 cents.
