Creeps. — And that the said James Tilghman have and hold fifty three slaves, according to a list by us made out, and delivered to him. And also one third part of all monies of said Estate, as above described, to be paid to the said James Tilghman by Alexander Hemsley, Administrator on the Estate of the afore Lloyd Tilghman. Also one third part of the plate together with a pair of plated candle sticks, according to a list by us made out, and delivered to him. Also one half of all the household and kitchen furniture in quality and value, except the articles herein before disposed of, to be allotted to him according to our directions given for that purpose. And that the said James Tilghman also have and hold one third in number and value of all the horses, mules, cattle, sheep, and hogs, and of all other live stock not herein before mentioned. And the Referees also award to the said James Tilghman the plank and all other building materials now at Rich Neck, and which were at any time provided by his father for the purpose of reestablishing that antient and venerable seat, where rest the bones of his Forefathers. —

And the Referees direct, that if there should be any other property belonging to the said Estate, beside what has been disposed of by the above award, that such property be by the heirs divided into three equal portions, and that they each take a part by lot. — And the Referees, now recollecting the farming utensils, do award them according to the above mode.

And We, the Referees do also direct that the Administrator shall have the management and direction of all the Tenements of the said Estate, till the end of this year; and also of all the crops, now growing, or that shall be pitched and come to maturity within the present year. And that the wheat crops now growing; and such other portion of the said crops, as have been usually made for sale, be disposed of by the Administrator, and the proceeds together with the rents of the Tenements afore in three equal portions be paid to the heirs by the said Administrator on the first day of January