steadiness – his character wholly unexceptionable, and that he certainly possesses excellent talents. He is of opinion, that you had best communicate with him yourself. You will direct to Union College, Schenectady N.Y. His christian name is, Andrew.

I indulged myself in the hope of seeing you, from the small intimation you gave – but the harvest is so fast approaching that for the present I have abandoned the idea – it would give me much pleasure indeed to have a good long talk with you – The hint you ~~[illegible]~~ gave about the Sugar, is a matter of deep consideration – I had thought of this ~~[illegible]~~ a little before ~~[illegible]~~, not that I contemplated such a movement for myself – because I am held by fetters that do not properly belong to me – it is certainly, in the present posture of affairs in this Country, the only profitable application of our labouring population. I am pleased with what you say about the Miss C. concern – I should be truly glad for a more speedy return of the funds I have expended in that direction – in fact, I have met with injustice from that quarter – but of this when we meet – apropos – When you visit Talbot again, furnish me with a statement of the monies paid you by Jenet & myself – you had some recollection from him, if I recollect aright – and you gave me credit for the carriage & something else, I cannot at present say – in truth, I never saw the statement you furnished Mr. Bullitt – and I want this matter from under your hand before a final settlement with W.H.T.

You ~~had~~ may not attend to the appointments you made &c. I want only the small matters before mentioned.

That whole matter in the management of Mr. Carmichael and the Adm. J.H. has been miserably conducted – I heard a thing about Mr. C. lately in his capacity as counsel – which filled me with astonishment – It won't do to put on paper – I trust our Chil. affairs will go on better now – The pig seems to have some hopes of Cheed – really the man might have done better – but for his opposition to J.H. – I agree with you in the apprehension that the latter is not long for this world – he looks wretchedly – but if he lives, and enjoys health – the sample he has given of his management almost precludes the hope of a proper disposition of the affairs in the Trust. Mr. T. is well – and wife joins me in kind remembrance to you all.

Yrs truly
