Dear John, Thursday morning.

Just as your letter was handed to me I was on the point of getting into my carriage to go to Doctor Jones's with Mr. Pearce who is now here with Doctor Wakeman from Flint — I will if you please only take time at present to assure you, that I am perfectly satisfied of the strict honour and propriety of your conduct in relation to little Fanny. That my dear and much lamented sister, received a wrong impression of my intentions in the conversation I had with her is most certain, as I shall be able to convince you — When this is done I shall then have to satisfy you of the propriety of my conduct as well as Mr. Silgrimans — It was Araminta who made an observation in the hearing of Fanny, which induced her to think she was to come home — Mr. Silgriman understanding there was some mistake, delicately sealed his lips on the subject —

I have to go to Smyths Street and Flint or I would certainly come to see you, it would give me much pleasure if you could come here to night.

Yours most sincerely

Mat. Silgriman
