whose family emigrated from Dermond, Flanders and was granted large estates about 1640, on the sire of the present city of Brooklyn, New York.

Arthur Emory died in 1699 and by his second wife left two sons, Arthur, Jr. and John, by his third wife, Catherine, he left two sons, William and a second Arthur, and also a daughter, Ann. Catherine afterwards married Edmund Prior, and died, according to her will, in 1749. (Wills, deeds, grants, etc. - Land office records in Annapolis - Liber X, folio 391 and copies Talbot County wills in Ann Arundel County Courthouse, Liber H, folio 269.)

Arthur Emory, Jr., born 1666, was one of the earliest members of the first county court of Queen Annes, 1708. He had a pew in Wye Church and was a vestryman in St. Paul's parish in 1704. He died September 22, 1747, and lies buried at Ingleside, originally known as "Emory's Fortune", which was one of the earliest colonial estates of the Emory family. It is located near the present village of Queenstown, his tombstone shows that he had two wives, Anne Thomas died Nov. 10, 1721, and Jockline (Jaqueline) Littilen. His will (Arthur 1747) probated November 25th, 1747, shows he left the following sons and daughters: John Jr., Arthur III, Thomas, Gideon and James, and also four daughters.

Thomas Emory was the father of Thomas Lane Emory of Baltimore and the "Woodridge" Emory branch, now of Baltimore County, are descendants of Gideon Emory. Thomas Lane Emory married Elizabeth Hopewell. Gideon married Mary Marsh, daughter of Thomas Marsh, 1716. He died 1784, leaving sons Wm. Wilson, Gideon, Jr., John and James.

Thomas Lane Emory of "Warrington" was the ancestor of the Richard Emory family of Baltimore county, (Richard Emory married Anna Gittings), represented at this time by Emory Warfield, Henry M and S. Davies, sons of the late Henry M. Warfield, 1828-1885, and his wife, Anna Emory, grandmother of Wallis Warfield, now the Duchess of Windsor, also

Arthur Emory was Justice of the Peace - Kidder R.T. No. A page 27 - 1730.