to be bred under the same conditions, that my Father was. I heard you offend me the service of your horse for the colt by his side, but thought of that proposition only in case we should breed both mares. The morning I took the mare down to your place my Father had his already geared for me to take down, but I finally persuaded him to let me take mine unleaded. He did however speak of breeding his mare to one of your young horses afterwards, as the fee was less. I am very much interested in stock, but am thinking more about getting through school at present than anything else. If the mare should prove with-foal which I think is better probable, I think everything will turn out least satisfactorily for both parties.

Very Resp.
