Remarks Green Mountain

The whole of this Hill or Mountain appears of a black mould and sandy clay, quite moist and very deep — The Rocks on each side are of a substance like that of a cinder quite black, very light, and easily penetrated. There are two Caves of Ten feet square made by the people who inhabit them, and are found to answer much better than Tents — The Hill is generally cover'd with clouds and receive's a great quantity of Rain, many acres may be cultivated and there appears not a doubt but would yeild abundant Crops of all kinds of Vegetables the approach up is difficult but with some labour, another way may be made to pass by the lower springs
