raught, as every thing is destroyed below this & of course no Object to the Enemy, so that the natural conclusion is, that this place & perhaps higher up must be the Object. I have got every thing from St Leonards which was left there

Burney's

My Officer who was near there (at their landing) reports that they went onboard one of our gunboats that was sunk level with the water, & attempted to blow up part of her deck, but did not trouble the other, that he returned in the evening & next morning on going to the place met a number of the Inhabitants, who had been onb^d the Gun boats, & tore up & plundered every peice of Iron old Copper &c they could get at, he took it from them, and Observed they were more anxious
