12th May 1818.

of Chesapeake to Ocracock, for the purpose of taking or destroying the aforesaid Enemy's Armed and Merchant Ships thereat, previously receiving on board His Majesty's Ship bearing his the said Rear Admiral's Flag, and the other ships so destined by the Memorialist, a detachment of the 102nd Regiment commanded by Lieutenant Col. Charles Napier then present in the Expedition whom the Memorialist had by his Orders to Sir Sydney Beckwith Assistant Quarter Master General, Commanding Officer of the Troops employed on the Coast of the United States as beforementioned, caused to be also detached to Ocracock, to act in conjunction with and under the Orders of the said Rear Admiral Sir George Cockburn on the Service above recited;- That the said Rear Admiral Sir George Cockburn did, in pursuance of the said Orders he received from the Memorialist proceed from the Bay of Chesapeake to Ocracock, where he captured the Enemy's Armed Brig "Anaconda" and the Enemy's armed Schooner "Atlas", and destroyed the other shipping as well as the Forts and Resources of the Enemy with that marked Ability, Zeal and judicious good Conduct so strongly displayed and exerted by the said Rear Admiral on every occasion - and having completed the Enterprize he returned, agreeably to his Orders, and rejoined the Memorialist, his Commander in Chief, at the Bay of Chesapeake;- That the aforesaid American Brig "Anaconda," upon being captured, was sent, with her Stores and Cargo to Halifax, and the aforesaid