SATURDAY MORNING............DEC. 8, 1883.

A MARYLAND FARMER'S VIEWS.

Though a Republican He Would Banish the Negro Laborer.

Mr. E. B. Emory, proprietor of the Poplar Grove Farm, near Centreville, Md., is attending the fat stock show, and a reporter for the Inter-Ocean met him at the Sherman House and found him a very pleasant gentleman. He is the possessor of some pronounced views relative to the negro in the South, as will be seen by the interview below:

"What is the condition of stock-raising and agriculture in your State since the war?"

"Before the rebellion there was little done in stock-raising compared to what is now done.—The farming interests are varied, but in the line of stock there is a growing interest manifested in the raising of first-class cattle, sheep and hogs. You see, since the war, and since people are thrown more upon their own resources, there is much more to invite the young, and the old men too, to do better work in whatever lines they undertake, and the result is shown in a growing interest and success in all kinds of enterprises. I tell you, Sir, the abolition of slavery was a godsend to the South. In this way: The removal of their slaves made the people self-reliant. Present negro laborers? Well, we have a good deal of trouble with them. The older men who have been slaves and are accustomed to the regular routine of manual labor are quite capable hands, but the young lot are hard to keep at work. But then the people are growing to see the advantage of fertilization on their lands; they are raising twenty-five bushels of wheat where they used to raise fifteen, and seventy-five of corn where it used to be fifty; they are growing less and less dependent upon the negro labor and the prospects for our State are flattering indeed. We can compete now with our Western farmer friends in meat and grain, we are close to market, and our stock goes into the market fresh from the pastures."

"Is there much of the old sectional feeling left in your State?"

"Very little, indeed. Liberal-minded people see the fact that all this old feeling is dying out. The negroes are treated with all the civility the law allows, but we find that when a negro gets from under the supervision of the white man he has a tendency to revert back to his original barbaric condition of indolence and want of character."

"Is their condition improved since the war?"

"We cannot say that it is. The negro is not susceptible of education except where white blood is introduced into his veins. Capacity to learn among the full-blooded negroes is the exception. Amalgamation? No; I don't think there is any tendency that way. There is the kindliest feeling between the whites and blacks in Maryland, but there is no tendency toward amalgamation. It will never come."

"Would the South be better off without the negro?"

"Yes, Sir, if the negro could be removed from the South it would be better, for when white labor is substituted for the black it will add to the thrift and enterprise of the land. Before the abolition of slavery many of the people were very indolent—their lives made them so. There was no call upon them for development of their own physical and mental resources. Now they are depending more and more upon themselves, and they are becoming stronger all the time."

"I am a Republican," continued Mr. Emory, "though all my people were Democrats. But we don't care much who is President, providing we have competent business men to manage the affairs of the nation."

A THRILLING RIDE.

How His Honor Waited For Sambo to Bring the Jug Home.

One night a Carolina judge had been out very late, and on his return, after stabling his horse, he kept vigil even later with some sympathetic friends. On rising in the morning and descending to the breakfast-room, his throat very dry, what was his surprise to find the demijohn that stood on the table in a similarly arid condition.

"Sambo."

"Y-yes, Sah."

"Take this john—saddle the mare and ride down to the Corners and get it filled as quickly as you know how. Do you hear?"

"Y-yes, Sah."

His order given, and the slow and stuttering Sambo out of the room, the thirsty son of Bacchus and Minerva sat himself down, watch in hand, to await the committing of his commission. "Two minutes," he murmured, brokenly, gasping as chickens do when their porridge is too dry—"the mare is bridled—saddled—and Sambo is on her back. Now he is down the path, out the gate and on the highway. Good old Bessy! How she flies along! Now they are crossing the brook—now—and now—the two miles are finished and they are at the store.—Two minutes for the boy to finish waiting on the customers already there—two minutes to draw the—for Sambo, and it is on the way. Here it comes. Over the brook, and by the tree—along the road—along the lane—through the gate—up the patch—and here it is with Sambo!"

"I s-say, M-assa, I c-can't find that ere bridle any wha! Guess ye must ha' bringed it in last night!"

A SHEPHERD BOY'S IDEA OF PRAYER.

A little lad was keeping his sheep one Sunday morning. The bells were ringing for services at the church, and the people were going over the fields, when the little fellow began to think that he too would like to pray to God. But what could he say, for he had never learnt any prayer. However, he knelt down and commenced the alphabet, A, B, C, D, and so on to Z. A gentleman happening to pass on the other side of the hedge heard the lad's voice, and, looking through the bushes, saw the little fellow kneeling with folded hands and closed eyes, saying his A, B, C's.

"What are you doing, my little man?" said the gentleman, kindly.

The little lad looked up. "Please, sir, I was praying."

"But what are you saying your letters for?"

"Why, I don't know any prayers, only I felt in my heart that I wanted God to take care of the sheep, so I thought if I said all I knew, he would put it together and spell all that I wanted."

"Bless your heart, my little man, he will, he will! when the heart speaks right the lips can't say wrong."

The prayer that goes to heaven must come from the heart.

ON one of the Northern trains recently was an old lady who evidently had never before made a railroad journey. After looking about her some time in curiosity, her eyes alighted on the bell-line, and she asked the waiter boy, who happened to be passing by at the time, what it was for. "That marm," said the boy with a wicked twinkle in his eyes, "is to ring the bell when you want anything to eat," and passed on. Shortly after, the old lady got down the family umbrella, and, reaching up to the bell-line, gave it a vigorous pull. Of course the brakes were applied, the windows thrown up, questions asked, etc., the old lady sitting calmly through the confusion. Presently the conductor came rushing through the car, exclaiming: "Who pulled that bell?" "I did," replied the old lady, meekly.—"Well, what do you want?" snapped the conductor, impatiently. "Well," said the old party, meditatively, "you may bring me some hash."

QUINTESSENCE OF
Phosphated Iron, Quinine & Strychnia
Put up in Pills and in Liquid Form,

And is a sure cure for DEBILITY resulting from any cause, thinness or sluggishness of the blood, derangement of the Digestive Organs, Diseases of the Nervous System, Typhus, Typhoid and Intermittent Fevers, Ague and Fever, and is the very best counteracter of malarial influences and cure for malarial diseases, and as a nervine and sedative, quieting the nervous system, and inducing Refreshing Sleep, it has no equal. It is endorsed by medical practitioners here and is frequently prescribed by them in their practice, and is considered one of the very best remedial agents known for the diseases for which we recommend it. We challenge the closest scrutiny into its composition and virtues. Read the following:

EXPLANATION OF THE ABOVE MEDICINE.

PHOSPHORUS—Means light, and medically imparts strength and vigor to the system, as the rays of the sun do to animal and vegetable life.
IRON—Is a purifier and enricher of the blood, the most important of the constituents of the human body.
QUININE—Is the Tonic of Tonics, and exercises a powerful and healthful influence upon the digestive organs, and finally STRYCHNIA—In very small proportions (as in this combination) is a most excellent nervine, acting upon and regulating the entire nervous system. Ask your physician about the above formula, and he will say it is good.
Price in large bottles $1; Trial bottles 35c. Pills in boxes $1 per box, or six boxes for $5. Sent by mail to any point, free of charge, upon receipt of price. Prepared and sold by DAVIS & MILLER,
No. 12 N. Howard St., Baltimore.

A pamphlet of full explanations of the above medicine, and treating of its composition and administration, and stating the diseases to which it is applicable, will be cheerfully given to any one who may call on me, it will be sent free to any address furnished by postal card, and will also hereafter accompany each bottle. o21y.
