WHAT THE SNOW BIRDS SAY

"Cheep! cheep!" said some little snipe
As they were flying down;
"We haven't a nest,
Or a place to rest,
Save the oak tree bending down."

"Cheep! cheep!" said little Wee Wee
The snipe bird of all;
"I have never a care
In this winter air—
We will sit and sing down."

"Cheep! cheep!" said father Graybreast
"You're a thoughtless bird, my dear;
And warm war feet
When snow and ice are here."

"Cheep! cheep!" said little Wee Wee
"You're a queer fellow;
But think of the fun
For each little one
Who we have for and snow!"

"No! I can see, from my perch on a tree,
The thickest, merriest sight
Boys skating along
On the ice so strong."

"Cheep! cheep!" said little Wee Wee
"A right that's better far
Than the boys' skating—
With clustering girls
Amused as bright as a star."

"Ah!," said his brother Brighteye
"See me and now;
His large nose is far
Than the boys' skating—
With clustering girls
Amused as bright as a star."

"I like the cheerful snow,
The boys and girls and
The laughing and singing
The snowbirds sing,
And I like the cheerful snow."

A GIRL IN BLUE.

There she sits in her elegant new morning dress, nothing in the world to do but amuse herself; and I must stain my hands paring potatoes and onions, and I don't know what all for dinner! A dress with a train, and she only sixteen! Only two years and a few months older than I am! How would I look in a train? I never expect to have such an elegant dress as she has on this morning, and she is only sixteen!

"O, you may see her," said Mr.
Snicker, holding out his arm as if he was about to be measured by the tailor,
and looking with one eye over at the Jersey shore. "I ain't got no money that I can tell ye."

And he came to Uncle Isaac.
There were many behind him, whose turn was yet to come, in case nothing was found upon him.
