LETTER FROM WORTON.

What I Have Seen—Thinks I to Myself—Things Ought not to be.

Notwithstanding the many disadvantages under which Worton Station has labored, she has outstripped and become the envy of her neighboring villages. We have now a population of one hundred—there being eighteen voters—and it would take the fingers on both hands to count the number here, who never let the wine cup pass their lips to another's. This is a sore evil and a stain on the village, which has a lodge of Good Templars whose success has as yet been but imperfectly attained, nor will it be, until this class of people shall have been reached. Thinks I to myself, we should be temperate in all things. It is impossible to conceive a condition more wretched and miserable than that of a mind compelled to drain the bitter dregs of the cup long since quaffed, and to repeat, in endless rounds, the follies that no longer have the power to satisfy, even for the moment, the poor victims of their enchantment. The drunkard, the glutton and the debauchee afford illustration of this principle.

Talmage said there was one thing worse than English snobbery, and that was American snobbery. We have inherited many virtues from our mother country, but have not been slow in inheriting her vices, and of all, have inherited none more largely than that of snobbery. To be convinced of this we need not go to our large cities, where we will find it in excess, but we see enough by staying at home.

Thinks I to myself, the greatest injury to any community is an unruly tongue imbued with deadly poison. I have heard them pick their neighbors character for character, and utterly destroy all confidence their friends had in them. Every person has a legal right to as good a character as they possess, and no one has a right to destroy it, yet how often it is done. As for myself I'd rather pitch my tent on a bed of rattlesnakes than by such a person.

I have seen young men way down in the scale of moral worth and personal beauty get nice young ladies to go with them simply because they sported a nice team. Then, these I to myself, but girl in love with that horse, most assuredly not with the man. Too many girls have married for a nice horse, and found out only too late that they had married only an inferior animal after all. I have seen temperate men call on ladies to spend the evening, and be outdone by some fellow who dropped in half drunk, simply because he was feeling good, as they call it, and felt like talking nonsense.

Too many girls have married nice young men who drink for fun with the expectation of reforming them, and found out only too late that they were not equal to the emergency. Any man that will not respect a lady before he is married most assuredly will not afterwards.

I have seen an old man and his wife lay in a hut and suffer pain and exposure with scarcely the necessities of life, and not Christianity enough in the community to go and offer a prayer or a morsel of bread.

I have seen men so eager in their pursuit of "filthy lucre" that they would resort to almost any means to obtain the almighty dollar. Knowing what mighty lever money is in the hands of man, and the power and influence it brings its possessor, we are not surprised at the hot contests manifested among men for its possession. It is the shortest road to power and influence, that causes the desire to excel, which is almost universal among men. It animates the sports of childhood, and gives zest to the sober duties and realities of life. It penetrates the camp, the court, the halls of legislation and of justice. It enters into the peaceful rivalries of the school, the college, the learned professions, and into those more fearful contests for superiority which savage nations in hostile encounters on the field of strife and courage. But in our race to excel, let us not forget our duty to God and our fellow-man, let us remember:

That we get back our used as we measure, And we cannot do wrong and be right; Nor can we give pain and feel pleasure, For justice averages each right.

THE MAN WHO HEARD.

When Thomas Andrews took his station in the Detroit Police Court he held his hand to his ear and inclined his head toward the court in very good imitation of a deaf person. He was there only two weeks ago, but he had heard clean, parted his hair in the middle, and expected to pass for a stranger.

"The charge is drunkenness," remarked his Honor.

"Hay!" shouted Thomas.

"The charge is drunkenness."

"Yes, I'm a stranger here. Got here last night from Rochester. Fine town you have here. What's the population of Detroit?"

"The charge against you is drunkenness," shouted the court, as he bent over the desk.

"Drunk, eh?"

"Yes."

"No?"

"Yes!"

"The officer says he found you lying in an alley."

"California. Never was there in my life! I've got a brother in Oregon, though, and maybe you mean him."

"You were in an alley?"

"Can't catch it. I think I shall stop here for a day or two and then go on to Chicago."

"This man seems to be stone deaf," said his Honor, as he fell back in a helpless attitude.

"Afraid not, your Honor," shouted Thomas as he gave his face a wipe.

"You may go," replied the court in an ordinary tone of voice.

Thomas promptly wheeled about and headed for the door.

"You may go up for sixty days."

"Hay!"

"Or shall I make it ninety?"

Thomas scratched his ear, knit his brows and followed Bijah into the corridor, where he jumped clear from the floor, struck the air with his fists and hissed:

"Bring me my match for a fool and I'll make jelly of him in a York minute!" Detroit Free Press.

Some of the conclusions of science would indeed be appalling but for their practical harmlessness. Thus geologists assert that if the continents and the bottom of the ocean were graded down to a uniform level, the whole world would be covered with water to a mile deep, so much greater is the depression of the ocean-bed than the elevation of the existing land.

VANDEBILT'S BARBER SHOP.

With Something About a Man Known as the Best Barber in New York.

N. Y. Letter to the Atlantic Constitution.

Most of the Socialists in this city are Germans. The Socialists believe in the assassination of monarchs. Our American monarchs are millionaires. William H. Vanderbilt is despotic by two hundred millions. Still he lets a German draw a keen blade over his throat every day. There is a quiet and jolly old German, with a high forehead, a perfectly bald head and an immense mustache waxed at the ends, who may be seen any morning of the year going down Fifth Avenue with the march of a dissipated Russian grenadier and the smile of a happy infant. He is gentle and self. Everybody who knows him calls him Jakey, but he owns the full name of Jacob Abser. Every morning about 9 o'clock he stops at the magnificent residence of Wm. H. Vanderbilt, greets the servant who opens the door blandly and goes at once to Mr. Vanderbilt's barber shop. So much has been written about his house that it seems hardly as though nothing new could be told, but many changes take place, and in the south wing, adjoining Mr. Vanderbilt's dressing-room, there has been fitted up a barber shop. It is small, and in the middle of it is a barber's chair, made of dark mahogany and inlaid with mother of pearl. The hairboards of the room, the cornices and the door and window frames are of the same shade of mahogany, and the mother of pearl decorations are identical with those on the chair. The chair is of the regulation barber shop pattern. Old Jakey shaves the two-handed millionaire, and then drifts down the avenue, nodding gracefully to stage-drivers and giving the occasional policeman whom he meets the Fifth Regiment salute. He shaves several other wealthy men on his way down, and finally ends with Commodore Garrison, on Park Avenue. Then he goes back to his humble home in the lower Bowery and smokes a strong German pipe and plays pence with his wife until 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

Then he wanders up to town again and visits one or two old gentlemen who prefer to be shaved before dinner rather than in the morning. He returns again to the Bowery, goes to a favorite lager beer saloon in Roosevelt street and sits in one particular chair until 11 o'clock. Then he stalks off to bed. He is close to 60 years of age and is said to be the best barber in New York. He gets his own price for his work and probably older customers than any other barber in the world. He shaved Fernando Wood thirty years.
